Brest-Litovsk Falls Into Hands Of Russian Army, Report

HEAVY FIGHTING

Bolsheviki Lose Many Men In Engagement In Toporowo Region

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, August 2.—The Berliner Tageblatt's correspondent in East Prussia telegraphs that the Polish retreat has slowed down. The Poles have taken up a position on the River Narev as far as Metrolenka. This stiffening of their resistance is ascribed to the arrival of the first large batch of volunteers.

A mass of Bolshevik infantry is in the vicinity of Lomsha and, supported by General Budienny's cavalry, in the center, is moving on Warsaw.

Although the Russian cavalry has not crossed the East Prussian frontier, recruiting for the Red Army has begun in East Prussia. Prospective recruits must have belonged to one of the Socialist parties since the Revolution.

BREST-LITOVSK FALLS

London, August 2.—A German wireless message states that Brest-Litovsk has been captured by the Bolsheviks.

The Times Warsaw correspondent telegraphs that the Polish Armistice Commission, headed by General Romer, has arrived at Baranovitchi. They were delayed by a broken railway bridge. The Soviet delegates are reported to have been relieved to see the Poles. Marshal Pilsudski and French officers are strengthening the defense of Lemberg.

According to the Morning Post Warsaw correspondent the Polish defense has stiffened owing to menace to the capital, which is completely girdled by trenches and entanglements.

The Warsaw newspapers are preparing the public for the arrival of the Bolsheviks.

Warsaw, August 2.—Numerous Britishers and Americans, including many officers, have joined the Polish army.

BOLSHEVIKI LOSSES HEAVY

London, August 2.—The report that Polish resistance is stiffening is supported by the latest Polish communique, which states that fighting to the region of Brody and Toporowo is proceeding in favor of the Poles. The Bolsheviks have suffered heavy losses in the latter region and the Chief of Staff of the Bolshevik cavalry has been killed. The Poles repulsed all attacks at Sereth. The situation on the other fronts is stationary.

The Times correspondent at Warsaw states that M. Daczynski, the Vice-President of the Polish Ministry and the leader of the Socialist Party, in the course of an interview, declared that the Polish conditions for an armistice were:

POLES ARMISTICE TERMS

(1) The independence of Poland.
(2) No interference in Polish affairs by the Bolsheviki.
(3) No disarmament.
(4) The establishment of the old frontier of Congress Poland, though Poland would accept the line occupied by her armies when the armistice is signed.

There is reason to believe that the Allies do not intend to allow the Bolsheviki to protract the armistice negotiations unduly.

Mrs. Dick Emphatically Denies Divorce Rumor

Mrs. Madeline Force Astor-Dick, former wife of Colonel John Jacob Astor, has vigorously denied that she has leased a home at Reno, Nev., or that she contemplated doing so. She also denied reports from Reno that she intended to become a resident of that place. Mrs. Dick was the second wife of Colonel Astor, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster.

JAPANESE DENY GIVING ARMS TO MANCHURIA BANDS

(Reuter's Service)

Tokio, August 3.—The Foreign Office has published a flat denial of the report in American newspapers, stating that Japan was hiring and arming bandits in Manchuria for the purpose of embarrassing the military guards of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The Foreign Office states that the report, published in America, is based upon an alleged official report to the State Department at Washington and asserts that while it is true that bandits are committing depredations along the railway, the Japanese have no connection with their activities.

AIRMAN FALLING TO DEATH WARNS CROWD OF PERIL

Mechanic Waves Spectators Aside As Plane Crashes At Japan's Capital

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, August 3.—The seaplane smash, which occurred here yesterday evening, resulted in the death of both occupants of the machine, Flight Lieutenant Kilby and Mr. A. Sunman, his mechanic. They were both killed instantaneously.

There were 10,000 spectators on the ground.

When the aviators were attempting to bank low at an altitude of 500 feet, the crowd were horrified to see the machine crash nose downward to the ground. Eyewitnesses state that Mr. Sunman waved a warning to the crowd as the machine shot downward and thereby doubtless saved many lives.

Court Martial For Irish Remedy Proposed In Bill Before House Of Commons

Powers Of Defense Of Realm Act Would Be Extended To Quell Disorders In Emerald Isle Under Measure Up For Debate

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 3.—The text of the "Restoration of Order in Ireland Bill" was issued today.

The bill consists of only two clauses, which state that as ordinary law is inadequate for the prevention and punishment of crime and the maintenance of order in Ireland, powers are granted for the extension to Ireland of the provisions of the Defense of the Realm Act as regards trial by court martial.

Crimes so tried shall be punishable with the punishment thereto assigned by Statute or Common Law, but it is provided that when a person is charged with a crime which is punishable by death, the court martial shall include one person, not necessarily an officer, nominated by the Lord Lieutenant, such person being certified by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland or the Lord Chief Justice of England as possessing legal knowledge and experience.

BLAMES GOVERNMENT

London, August 2.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Alexander MacCallum Scott (Liberal) suggested that in view of the murders in Ireland the Government should reconsider their decision to postpone the Home Rule Bill until after the autumn holidays.

Mr. Lloyd George declared that carrying the Bill before the adjournment would not immediately end the outrages in Ireland.

Mr. Joseph Devlin (Irish Nationalist) affirmed that the outrages were largely due to resentment at the Government's proposals.

Mr. Lloyd George replied that if he thought so, he would regard the Irish situation as more desperate than ever. An impossible situation would be created if the fact that the Government were doing their best to satisfy the legitimate demands of Ireland, were made an excuse for murder and outrage.

IRISH SEE INSULT

Mr. Devlin declared that the proposals were regarded in Ireland as an insult.

The Premier replied that he could not hope that any measure carried by any British House of Commons, would meet the unreasonable demands, which the bulk of the Irish people, whom Mr. Devlin did not represent were making at the present moment.

Mr. Devlin declared that the Government's policy was driving the moderates in Ireland into the camp of the extremists.

Mr. Lloyd George emphasised that the Government had done their best according to their view of what was right and fair for both partners of the British Isles. He did not agree that the moderates in Ireland had anything to do with outrages which, he firmly believed, were the work of a very small minority.

MODERATES TERRORISED

The moderates, continued the Prime Minister, were so terrorised that they did not dare express their views, but recently there had been signs that moderate opinion had begun to assert itself. The latest instance was the very fearless verdict of wilful murder in the case of Mr. Brooke, Deputy Lieutenant of County Wicklow.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, then formally presented the "Restoration of Order in Ireland Bill," which was read a first time without discussion.

Mr. Bonar Law stated that a guillotine motion would be proposed in respect of the bill on August 5.

MILITARY PATROL AMBUSHED

London, August 2.—How a military patrol of 8 men was ambushed by 50 armed men near the village of Bruree, Co. Limerick, in July is described in an official report issued today.

The first volley from the assailants seriously wounded a private, who lay helpless in the road. Two or three of the assailants then laid down, used the wounded man's body as rifle rest and took cover behind it.

Their fire could not be returned but after half an hour's fight, the assailants were driven back.

His comrades then dragged the wounded man to a cottage, which the raiders at once surrounded pouring in a heavy fire, until the arrival of military reinforcements, when they fled.

One assailant was found mortally wounded.

LOGUE CONDEMNS VIOLENCE

In connection with the preparations for the Feast of the Assumption on August 15, Cardinal Logue, Primate of all Ireland, was written a letter which was read in all Roman Catholic churches at Dundalk, in which, after condemning acts of violence, he forbids anyone subject to his jurisdiction to take part in political meetings or processions on Assumption Day, as is usual.

Pomp Features Arrival Of Chang Tso-lin At Peking

Mukden Chief Followed By Generals Tsao And Wu Enters China's Capital City

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Peking, August 4.—Amidst great pomp and military display, General Chang Tso-lin, Tuchun of Fengtien and one of the leading anti-Anfuites who caused the downfall of the notorious political gang, arrived in Peking today.

A official reception was given in his honor by the President, the Cabinet and the other bureaus upon his arrival. The roads were cleaned as he marched at the head of his army and passed under the triumphal arch which was erected in honor of the victors.

General Chang was later followed by Generals Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu, who were also enthusiastically received.

The three militarists will confer with President Hsu Shih-chang in a day or two.

NEW CABINET SOON

The Presidential Mandate appointing General Chin Yun-peng, the nominee of the three generals, will be promulgated immediately after General Chin's arrival, which will take place shortly.

The entire new Cabinet is expected to be named by the end of the week.

One of the first acts of the administration will be the issuance of a second list of war criminals, including Wang I-tang, the Northern peace delegate and Wu Kwan-hsin, captured by Tuchun Wang Chuan-yuan of Hupeh.

President Hsu is preparing a Mandate, censoring himself for mis-government. The censoring, however, will be very mild in nature.

PLAN RECONSTRUCTION

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, August 4.—Political interest is again focussing on Peking. The scheme for reconstruction and settlement is progressing.

The conferences at Tientsin after the arrival of General Wu Pei-fu have apparently settled the preliminaries, though the shaping of immediate political plan will not take place until after the arrival this afternoon of Generals Chang Tso-lin, Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu, who will promptly have an interview with the President.

The mandate dissolving the Anfu Club has been issued.

PRESIDENT BLAMES SELF

A mandate will be issued this evening, in which the President blames Himself for the recent troubles. The mandate will explain that the President has not been partial to any party and has not engaged soldiery to support his authority but, nevertheless, he has been unable to prevent the party struggle or to avert the conflict, in which many soldiers were killed and merchants and people made to suffer. Therefore, the mandate adds, it cannot be denied that he is lacking in virtue and ability.

The President then expresses the hope that the whole country will take warning from these disasters and the complicated situation and to this end should avoid quarrels among themselves.

USE OF GERMANS AGAINST REDS IS CHURCHILL PLAN

Lloyd George Heckled In House Of Commons For Colleague's Article

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 2.—There was a slight breeze in the House of Commons this afternoon when various members heckled Mr. Lloyd George regarding the recent article in the Evening News by Mr. Winston Churchill, which has been interpreted as suggesting that the military assistance of Germany should be invoked against the Bolshevik.

Replying to Lieut.-Colonel C.W.W. McLean (Unionist) who asked if the article was an expression of the agreed policy of the government, the Prime Minister said that he did not think the article was so much an expression of policy as "a hankering."

Lieut.-Col. McLean: "Does the Prime Minister approve hankering on the part of one of his colleagues on matters of vital European politics?"

Mr. Lloyd George: "I really cannot control my colleagues desires." (Cries of "oh you can get rid of him").

In response to further questions, Mr. Lloyd George said that he did not think the article contained a declaration which was inconsistent with the policy of the government.

Former Premier Painleve To Be Guest Of 21 Local Societies

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

Five Prominent Organisers Named To Devise Means Of Reception

An enthusiastic reception will be accorded by local organisations, 21 strong, to M. Painleve, former French Premier, writer, statesman and Chinese scholar, who is due to arrive in Shanghai by the end of this week. M. Painleve has been touring Northern China and reports from Tientsin indicate that he and his party have already left for Shanghai by steamer.

The decision to hold the reception was made at the meeting of representatives of 21 organisations yesterday at the office of the Shun Pao.

PLAN RECEPTION

The meeting was called to put the finishing touches to the plans of welcoming the United States Congressional party, which is due at Woosung this morning at 4 o'clock.

It was pointed out at the meeting that M. Painleve's sympathy with the Chinese has been of long duration and that his knowledge of the Chinese people is profound.

COMMITTEE FORMED

The representatives emphasised the necessity of expressing their appreciation to the French statesman and suggested that the original committee on reception for the Congressional Party assume the work of formulating plans for the entertainment of M. Painleve.

After a discussion, the meeting passed a resolution appointing a committee of five to devise means of entertaining the French Ex-Premier. The committee consists of Dr. C. T. Wang, Mr. H. Y. Moh, Mr. David Z. T. Yui, Mr. Huang Pen-pei and Mr. T. B. Chang.

FRENCH BLAME LLOYD GEORGE FOR COAL PLAN

Press Declares It Is Concession To Germany At Expense Of Nation

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 2.—The French press is commenting bitterly on the decision, reached at the Spa Conference with regard to coal, which is regarded in France as a concession to Germany, secured by Mr. Lloyd George at the expense of France.

The Times, referring to this state of public opinion in France, emphasises the necessity of Allied unity in view of the criticalness of the European situation and urges the British and French Government definitely to settle and clearly to declare their common policy in order to prevent serious misunderstandings.

PLAN IS APPROVED

London, August 2.—The House of Commons today approved the vote of Supply towards the 5,000,000 sterling advances in respect of German coal deliveries, in order to secure regular deliveries to France.

It was pointed out that the vote did not necessitate fresh borrowing, as it would be supplied from actual receipts under the reparation clauses of the peace treaty.

Sir Laming Worthington Evans, Minister without Portfolio, stated that the arrangement for advances was being made in order to provide the German miners with adequate food.

BENEFIT TO FRANCE

As regards French criticism of the arrangement, the Minister showed that the benefits accrued to France, while Great Britain was not receiving a single ton of coal but was getting equitable consideration in other directions under the agreement made at Spa.

Mr. Lloyd George emphasised the necessity for the advances. He said that the British representatives reported that people in Germany were not receiving within 60 to 70 percent of the food they had enjoyed before the war.

CHINESE PLACE FIFTY CARS AT THEIR DISPOSAL

Each Vehicle To Have One Returned Student To Act As Guide

CITY TO BE DECORATED

Many Changes In Program Necessitated As Result Of Situation

A radio received shortly after midnight last night by Mr. Edwin S. Cunningham, American Consul-General, from the U. S. Transport Great Northern brought the news that the big party of American legislators bound for Shanghai will not arrive until late this afternoon.

It had been believed that the Great Northern would arrive off Woosung about 4 o'clock this morning and that the visitors would arrive early in the morning, and with this expectation an elaborate program of affairs of welcome had been arranged to take place through the day today. In particular a Chinese feast arranged by 21 Chinese organisations for the tiffin hour necessarily must be postponed and probably it will not be possible to hold the reception at the Bureau of Foreign Affairs that was to have been given between the hours of 6 and 7 o'clock by eight Chinese officials.

TO HOLD BANQUET

It was thought last night that the visitors will reach the city in good time to carry out the closing event of the program that had been arranged for today. The Pan Pacific Union Banquet at the Astor House when addresses are to be made by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, Dr. Wu Ting-fang, Mr. Tong Shao-yi, Former American Minister Paul S. Reinsch and Mr. A. H. Ford.

According to messages the whole party numbers about one hundred and it includes two United States Senators and 17 representatives in addition to a list of officials.

The tender with the American and Chinese reception committees which was to have started down river early this morning will not go until some time this afternoon at an hour to be designated this morning when it is thought word will be received telling the exact time of the ship's arrival. The transport is to come up river as far as the Standard Oil Company's Pootung piers and from that point the visitors will be bought on to Shanghai by tender.

The revised list of visitors in the big party is as follows:

U. S. WARSHIPS GUARD PEITAIHO

Movement Of Chang Tso-lin's Troops Only Indication Seen Of War

(China Press Correspondence)

Peitaiho, July 31.—Here upon the shores of the Gulf of Pechili, with the armies of Chang Tso-lin pushing by our front door toward Tientsin, one hundred and fifty miles south, we have been passing the month of July. With the exception of a lesser number of trains running to and from our Beach Station and the lack of the usual mail being delivered to our doors, we would hardly know that a state of war has existed so near the shores of this sea. Oh yes, we forgot for the moment that American war vessels are standing by to see that no harm befalls the large group of American citizens here. The family of the American Minister Crane are also here and he himself has attempted to run down at week ends when Peking gates would open and the railroad would carry passengers.

Two lonely ruins still stand among the group of cottages to remind one of the Boxer Year when all the then cottages went up in flames. That burning brought the German army of occupation down to this Beach and the many wooden barracks, later bought by lot holders and turned into pretty cottages, now and then jog our memories, "lest we forget." It is rather a queer turn of the wheel of fortune when the Manchu family in Peking recently appealed to the Legations for protection, declaring that never again would there be a Manchu Monarchy.

Peitaiho covers a lot of ground. The foreign and Chinese summer homes are strung along six or seven miles of irregular beach. The coast line is much like the interrogation point (?) in shape, the lower end being West End by the Lotus Hills; the major curve designating the position of Lighthouse Point and the upper end Eagle Rock and Shell Beach. A series of rocky projections break this long beach into delightful bathing places. At Rocky Point which is about half way between the extremities of Peitaiho is found the larger group of houses. Here is the railway terminus, the assembly hall, the conference buildings, the movies, the baseball ground and the larger stores.

The beach lies five miles away from Peitaiho proper. When the German troops were here they built a small branch railroad and allowed the summer people to shunt their baggage and themselves down to the beach by the line. When they left, since the line had been built on privately owned land, no one cared to purchase the rolling stock and for a long time the Government railroad refused to build a branch line. People had to wade the marshes and blister over the sand dunes; and it took away much of the attraction for this fine resort.

In 1917 the railroad authorities were finally persuaded largely by the richer Chinese perhaps who began building at West End, to put in a branch line. Now houses are going up by the score every winter and the population is increasing by leaps and bounds. These wealthy Chinese are appreciating the place this year and showing it by subscribing a large sum for the putting in of macadamised roads from one end of the place to the other. Hitherto donkeys and rumbling carts have been the main means of locomotion. They are still here and the donkeys can take one a goodly distance for twenty cents an hour. Now we have in addition rieshas and doubtless motor cars will be here in another year or so. An occasional Chinese lady is seen in her sedan chair but most of the Chinese prefer the donkeys.

West End has been settled largely by these Chinese and by business people. In the last year large portions have been laid out into private parks. They are even talking of adding a new temple to the scenery. Hitherto the owners have been slow to plant trees. The beautiful roads would be made so much more attractive and so much pleasanter if be lined with shade trees. East Cliff is especially barren, but it is fairly recent that any extensive attempt has been made to lay out this section for residences.

Ni Shih-chung, Tuchun of Anhuei, came up early this month and thought he was going to get an opportunity to still farther improve his shattered health. But sudden war made him think that Tientsin was the healthier place and, leaving his family and some of his guards about the palace he was occupying, he hurried down to Tientsin, apparently to get into closer touch with Tuan Chi-jui with whose club he was affiliated. He is still there. Possibly when peace terms are settled he may have an opportunity to get back here, but the summer will be gone by that time—and Tientsin is some hot place in summer.

The general impression is that the cost of living in Peitaiho is somewhat above that in the other summer sanitoria in the Orient. Probably Kuling comes next in this matter of cost, the ratio between the two places being about as taels are to dollars. Kuling, when renting or building, usually talks in dollars while here the tael still holds sway. This year, owing to lack of rain throughout the north, the cost of food stuffs has increased somewhat.

Be that as it may, to sit out on one of the spacious verandas of a cottage built on same cliff over the sea, gives one the sensation of being on the sea itself. Sea breezes are ever blowing. Lying on a campcot with the sound of the waves drowning out ordinary sounds and the wind shaking the coverings of the cot, one has the impression of being "rocked in the billows of the deep," with the attendant seasickness left out.

At eleven thirty each day everybody and his family go in bathing. It is the social hour of the day. Brown is the favorite color and everyone is tanned. At Rocky Point are two fine diving rafts and at each of the other favorite beaches boats anchor at the bathing hour ready to aid any one in trouble and to afford an extra diving platform. Maybe everyone does not care to spend every summer at the seashore, but they have lost much if an occasional summer has not been filled with the salty sea water of Peitaiho.

Writer Wants Japanese Aid For Monarchy

Ku Hung-ming, the eccentric writer, has contributed an article to the Northern papers, advocating the restoration of the monarchial form of government in China with Japanese assistance, according to the Chinese newspapers. Both the Presidential Office and the Cabinet have ordered a thorough investigation of the mental condition of Ku and ordered the Chinese press not to reprint the article.

Local Organisations File Protest Against Harboring Anfu Outlaws With Envoys

Local organisations have protested with the Diplomatic Body against the sheltering of the leaders of the Anfu Club who are "wanted" by the Chinese authorities. They request that these traitors be not allowed to abide within the Legation Quarters or allowed to harbor in any foreign country, Japan especially.

The signatories of the telegram are the City Chamber of Commerce, The Shanghai Streets Union, the Chinese Cotton Mill Owners' Association, the Kiangsu Educational Association, the Tsungming, Tungchow and Haiman Chambers of Commerce, the Flour Guild, the Shanghai Bankers' Association, the Shanghai City Educational Union, the Chinese Weavers and Textile Association, the Chinese Overseas Club, and the Shanghai Fire Brigade Association.

HERE IS MESSAGE

Following is the text of the message:

"It has been constantly reported that many members of the defunct Anfu Club, such as Hsu Shu-cheng, Tsen Yao-ching, Ting Shih-yuan, Chu Shen, and others—are or have been in hiding in the Legation Quarters; special protection being given to them by the Japanese and Italian Legations and by the Japanese barracks and banks. It has also been rumored that they will be released from Peking under Japanese military protection. Upon hearing this we, the Chinese citizens, were greatly surprised as we have every reason to believe that these men are guilty of many crimes and misdoings. They have misappropriated public funds, they have stolen and sold Chinese public property and they have constantly stirred up strife and turmoil and trouble in order to avoid detection of their crimes.

Fighting has taken place around the Capital and the lives of many people have been sacrificed. Public opinion in China refuses to recognise these as political offenders. Your Government understands clearly the principles of international law and acting in accordance with such you will not allow yourselves to be led by a few whose intention it is to protect these men. We do not wish to see the cordial friendship between our country and yours injured simply because a few traitors and sinners want to put themselves under your protection. Therefore we hope that you will see that these men are removed from the Legation Quarters as soon as possible that you will order your nationals to remain neutral in this time of strife; and that you will refuse to allow these men admittance into your country. In order that justice may be meted out and that your cordial friendship may be retained, we send you this request."

WORD TO JAPAN

The following sentence was added to the message to the Japanese minister:

"During the past few years our citizens have been forced to look upon the Japanese with suspicion simply because they believed your diplomatic policy towards this country was unjust. We have never been able to trust any word uttered by your people simply because you have not offered us any proof to substantiate your claims."

CRICKET CLUB ENTERTAINS

A delightful club at home affair was given last night by the Shanghai Cricket Club at the club establishment and the feature of the evening's entertainment was the final appearance on their present visit to Shanghai of the inimitable Quaints who recently scored a big success in their engagement at the Lyceum theater. The club's quarters were artistically decorated and illumined and a big attendance was present.

ELWELL SLEUTHS PUT FRIEND ON GRILL FOR CLUE

Three Assistant District Attorneys Scent Fresh Angle On Murder

ROBBERY MOTIVE SEEN

Official Has Theory That Victim Sought Intruders When Slain

New York, August 1.—Several officials engaged in the inquiry into the murder of Joseph Bowne Elwell motored to the home of one of the dead turfman's acquaintances and spent the evening putting the man through the severest kind of grilling.

The strictest secrecy attended the affair, and no intimation was given as to the nature of the questions hurled at this man or as to the results of the session. The matter, however, is regarded as highly significant in view of recent statements that an arrest is not far distant.

The official party, it is understood, included three Assistant District Attorneys, John T. Dooling, John F. Joyce and Albert Blogg Unger, as well as two detectives attached to the police homicide squad.

CONFERENCE HELD

This expedition followed a day of unusual official activities. The members of the party that made the trip spent the afternoon in conference at the District Attorney's office with Capt. Arthur Carey of the police homicide squad and Capt. Thomas C. Walsh of the precinct in which the murder was committed.

In the early part of the afternoon reporters had been barred from the Criminal Courts Building for fear their presence might be disconcerting to witnesses who were questioned by the conferees and whose names were kept secret. When the newspaper men finally did gain access to the District Attorney's office Mr. Dooling announced it would be in possible to make public any of the latest developments in the case, but intimated they had been encouraging to the investigators.

NOT DOWNHEARTED

"We don't look downhearted, do we?" he asked.

Mr. Dooling explained that although recent inquiries have tended to focus attention upon one person, the investigators are proceeding with open minds. "We are working along every line that shows promise," he said, "irrespective of who may be the individual to whom our suspicions point."

An official who has been conducting one line of the investigation made some disclosures that may be regarded as highly important.

"It is the theory of several persons working upon this case," he said, "that the assassin admitted himself to Elwell's house while the card expert asleep, was lying across his bed upstairs.

"This," he said, "would account for the fact that Elwell was barefoot when he was slain. Now if the slayer had rung Elwell's door bell, as some persons have suggested, Elwell probably would have put on his shoes or slippers before answering the ring. Any one would do that. The fact that Elwell descended from his room on the third floor to the first without shoes or slippers on indicates one thing to me—that he heard some one moving about inside of his house and he crept downstairs barefoot in order that he might make no noise.

THEORY OF OFFICIAL

"Now suppose," added this official, "that the man, for we are very certain it was a man, who had come there to kill Elwell was hiding somewhere on that first floor when the card expert came downstairs. Perhaps he crouched behind a chair in the reception room. Elwell then in all probability glanced about the place and concluded there had been no ground for his apprehensions. His natural tendency would have been to try the front door to see if any one had been attempting to force it.

"In so doing he would have found his mail. His fears dispelled, he might have seated himself in the reception room to open his mail when the intruder stepped from his hiding place and shot him.

"The detectives," this official added, "have made a careful examination of the soles of Elwell's feet to ascertain just how much walking about he could have done without his shoes before the commission of the crime. They have found beyond doubt that he did very little. There was just a small amount of dust upon the soles, such as he must have got from the hardwood staircase which leads from the first to the second floor of his house. Had he been wondering about the premises barefoot for any length of time, or had he been pacing the floor, his feet would have shown it."

'DONE EVERY DAY'

In speaking of the likelihood of a man going down stairs to investigate a strange noise without any weapon, this official said: "It is done every day of the week. It is a foolish thing and many a man has met his death just that way."

It further appeared from this official's statements that the authorities are by no means certain robbery was not the motive behind the killing.

"The fact that Elwell's cash and valuables were untouched indicates nothing," he said. "If some one that Elwell knew went there for the purpose of robbing him and killed him because his presence had been discovered, it is quite probable this person was in such a hurry to get away that he did not dare stop to take money or valuables with him."

CIGARETTE CLUE

This official declared that the investigators feel certain the cigarette found on the floor near Elwell's body was not one of his own.

"I understand it was of a far cheaper grade than the kind Elwell smoked," he said. "We are sure it was dropped by the murderer."

In speaking of the theory that one of Elwell's numerous race track associates might have shot him he said: "He was killed in the same manner in which a person kills a horse; that is with a bullet hole in the middle of the forehead. Some people have taken this to support the idea that his slayer was a person who had spent much time around horses.

"I personally believe, he added, "that when this crime is solved it will be found to be far different than the theories that have been advanced. The solution will be a big surprise to all of the persons who have been reading and speculating about the case."

Court Martial For Irish Remedy Proposed In Bill Before House Of Commons

which will be introduced in the House of Commons on August 5.

London, August 2.—In the House of Commons today, in reply to a question, Mr. Lloyd George stated that during July there were 15 policemen, 4 soldiers and 3 civilians killed and 30 policemen, 22 soldiers and five civilians wounded in Ireland.

Replying to Commander Kenworthy, the Premier stated that the Government had not considered the possibility of negotiating with the Sinn Feiners on the basis of the proposal, made by De Valera at Washington on July 25, that Ireland should be given independence, similar to that enjoyed by Cuba. The proposal, Mr. Lloyd George declared, would involve the acceptance of an independent Republic of Ireland, to which the Government would never consent.

Finch Sails For Last Time As Liner Captain

New York White Star Officials Wave Him And The Baltic Bon Voyage

New York, June 27.—The departure yesterday noon of the White Star liner Baltic for Queenstown was in the nature of an occasion, for it marked the last sailing of Capt. William Finch, skipper of the big vessel. The ship was bedecked with flags and bunting, and New York officials of the line were on the pier to wave Capt. Finch goodby.

In the adjoining berth Capt. J. B. Ranson of the Adriatic, of the same line, had dressed his ship in flags in honor of his colleague.

Capt. Finch's retirement is due to a White Star regulation which pensions those in the service reaching the age of sixty, automatically dropping them from the active list. His only mishap in many years on the sea was the loss due to a German torpedo during the war of the steamship Arabic off the Irish coast. Capt. Finch swam forty minutes before being picked up after he himself had superintended the rescue of two women, two men and a child. For his bravery in this incident he was awarded the Order of the British Empire. Shortly after he was assigned to command the Baltic, on which he took Gen. Pershing and his staff to England on our entrance into the war.

The Baltic carried 2,195 passengers, among them William E. Corey, steel manufacturer; Capt. Robert Dollar, shipowner; the Right Rev. William Lawrence, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts; Bishop Frederick Keator of Seattle and Bishop J. H. McCormick of Michigan, on the way to the Lambeth Conference in London; Lord Dunmore and Charles and Benjamin Duveen, art dealers.

TEACH CHINESE TO USE SOAP IS EXPERT'S ADVICE

Man Experienced In Sanitary Work Suggests New Campaign Here

'DON'T WORK BACKWARDS'

Mosquito And Rat Plan Is Beginning At Wrong End, He Says

Distribute soap among the Chinese and teach them the value of its use, is the advice given to the Health Crusaders of Shanghai by a man who has had many years experience in practical sanitation and health work. He suggests that soap manufacturers be interested in the movement and believes they can be induced to supply samples of their product for use in the campaign. Discussing the matter he said:

"Considerable mention has been made of late anent the commendable Hygiene Campaign of the junior Y.M.C.A. members, but in the opinion of a practical sanitarian, their methods appear to be too theatrical and the utility of them a very meagre quantity.

"Their aim certainly is to inculcate Occidental standards of cleanliness and hygiene, but they are trying to do so by an Oriental process, the result of which will be very disappointing to say the least.

Judged by Western ideas Chinese read backwards, write backwards and in this instance they are surely starting at the wrong end.

RATS AS FOOD

"What is the use of brandishing a huge caricature of a rat in the air, and explaining its dangers to people many of whom look upon the rat as very appetising food?

"It is well known that the Cantonese eat smoked rats and enjoy them. What is the use of twirling a papier mache mosquito the size of a cat and explaining its ravages to people who are rarely bitten by them?

"We already have regulations for the cleanliness of houses alleyways and roads which are controlled by the Municipality which can be and are in a measure tactfully enforced.

"What about personal cleanliness?

INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM

"This is a matter of individual freedom, for which no regulation can be framed. It is true of course that restrictions could be put upon children attending school to see that they came vermin-free, but in no place in the world has a Health Officer the authority to tell a man that he needs a bath or that his hands are dirty.

"This is where the Y.M.C.A. workers could and should step in.

"In matters of hygiene the Chinese are as children. Bathe a child and put him in a clean suit and he is overconscious of his condition and for a time will exercise care not to soil himself until sooner or later he accidently does so, and then "in for a penny in for a pound," nothing matters or is too dirty for him. Adult Chinese are capable of avoiding most accidents.

"Now to the point—If the Y.M.C.A. workers would teach their fellows the importance of personal cleanliness first, they would be touching the vital spot at once. Many instances are known where employers have offered to provide a bath and bathroom for their servants, but their offers have been met with objections on the grounds that if a Chinese immersed himself in water as a foreigner does, he would become sick.

A SCENE IN SHANGHAI

"One very hot day last week, a mother was seen on the side of one of our side streets bathing her ten months' old child in a foot-tub, but she was using no soap, so the benefit of the tub was considerably reduced, although the baby seemed to be enjoying it.

"Who has not experienced under stress of circumstances, the difficulty of cleaning the hands even without soap?

"If the Y.M.C.A. workers were to appeal to Lever Bros., for instance, or even local soap manufacturers, they may get plenty of samples to issue as an advertisement.

"The B. A. T. Co. gives away many cigarettes, with apparent advantage to their business and soap makers may be induced to follow their example.

"To summarise: Let the Y.M.C.A. teach their fellows the advantages of using soap and water, particularly washing their hands before eating, and another matter may be suggested with advantage, re food. Instead of individuals dipping their chop-sticks into the common pot, on removing them from their mouths, let a spoon be used to take what they want, and place it on their own basin or dish as the case may be. Many a case of disease may be averted in this way.

EFFECT ON SURROUNDINGS

"A clean person dislikes living in dirty surroundings. Effect the cleanliness of the person and he will make an effect to see that his environment is clean.

"To a materialist, this health propaganda of the Y.M.C.A. workers is a commendable one, care of the body of which we know a great deal, seems more practical than caring for the soul of which we know so little, and in any case, most religions teach that "Cleanliness is next to Godliness" and this cannot be brought about without a plentiful use of soap and water."

Oil Supply Never Will Exceed Demand

Briton Who Controls Big Concessions Explains Present Situation

BY ROBERT J. PREW

How Great Britain obtained what he described as "a chain of oil concessions stretching from Mexico to Peru on the Pacific Ocean and from Mexico to British Guiana on the Atlantic seaboard" is narrated in an interview by D. Elliott Alves, the British oil magnate. He says it is inconceivable that the world's supply of oil will ever exceed the demand.

"These Caribbean Sea concessions," he stated, "were obtained by me as the result of eight years' hard work. They now form practically an uninterrupted chain covering millions of acres.

OTHER OIL FIELDS LIKELY

"The danger of the shortage of future oil supplies for commercial purposes has long been realised and seriously considered by those in the best position to judge of the danger and by others who at an early date foresaw the great benefits to be derived from the control of large supplies. Doubtless there are parts of the world where oil will yet be discovered, but is unknown today.

"Before creating and consolidating such a position as I have built up here, the world conditions years ago had to be carefully considered.

"It became a matter of high importance that lands where oil might be expected to be found should be scientifically examined, also that these lands should in any event be within measurable distance of the world's greatest markets, and that after the elaborate investigations necessary in the first instance if oil was to be found and handled on a commercial scale it should be located not too far from a seaboard.

"The regions included within the boundaries of the various republics stretching from Mexico through Central America far down into South America, through the discoveries of oil in the former republic and the knowledge of its existence in Trinidad, opened up a field for investigation and exploitation of a magnitude never before attempted by any organisation in the world.

"The outcome of this has been that a chain of concessions encircling practically two-thirds of the Caribbean Sea have come under British control. It is not to be expected—nor do I personally believe it—that oil will be discovered on every area that rights are held over, but it is a fact that oil is known to exist on every one of them, whether in commercial quantity or not yet remains to be seen. However, within the next few years, it is a fact that this company will be in a position to supply considerable quantities of oil for the world's markets.

"The United States will undoubtedly be, for some years to come, the world's greatest consumer of oil, and this important market lies at our doors.

"The faster oil is produced from every part of the world the greater will be the consumption, and it is inconceivable that the supplies will ever exceed the demand. Those of us who have studied the question realise this, and even a casual survey of the position, if proper data is taken as a guide, will make it conclusive. In every undeveloped country in the world where expansion is pressing it will be carried out by motor tractor. Railways, in time, will follow. Immense areas of Asia, particularly in China, India and other vast regions left untapped by railways must be developed by motor traction.

"Practically the whole of the shipping industry of the world would be diverted to the consumption of oil, were it known that sufficient supplies would be available at ports of call. The same applies to practically all the important railways of the world.

EXPORTS BIG RESULTS

"The British Controlled Oil Fields, and the other organisations which are more or less under my control, have a considerable staff of geologists and engineers now operating over wide areas. A large amount of material has been assembled in the United States and Great Britain, and considerable quantities are en route to various fields. Drilling rigs are in course of erection in Trinidad, Venezuela, Ecuador, Costa Rica and Salvador, and it is expected that in the near future very interesting information of considerable national importance, will be coming forward from these various centers."

NEW YORK "YANKEES," BY SETTING HOT PACE, MAKE "JAKE'S DREAM" COME TRUE

Owner Of Leading American League Club Has Laugh On Friends Who Urged Him To Keep Out Of Baseball

By Dudley Burrows

"Jake's Dream!"

This should be the title of the current big-league season in American baseball.

When Colonel Jacob Ruppert, a prominent brewer and all-round good fellow, several years ago bought the majority stock of the New York American League Club—the despised "Yankees"—his friends all advised him to go and have his head examined.

But the Colonel and his right-hower, Major "Tillie" Huston, had a dream. They announced that they were going to make those self-same "Yankees" the sensation, not only of New York and the American League, but of the baseball world.

The Yanks—formerly the "Highlanders"—had been major league jokes for almost a decade. When the New York Giants, in the National League, were playing at the Polo Grounds the police reserves were needed to hold back the crowds. Then the Yanks would come home—and the same reserves were called upon to go out and drum up a crowd!

SCRIBES FAITHFUL

Gee, it was fearful!

And, strangest of all, every baseball writer employed on the New York papers was a "Yankee" fan and pulling for the American Leaguers to get somewhere. Well, they did; but it was usually in the cellar—or on the cellar steps. They were seldom seen in the neighborhood of the flag-pole on top of the league establishment. They were furnace-men, pure and simple.

But—OH, BOY!

Look at 'em now!

Take a lesson from "Jake" Ruppert's book—his score-book as, season after season, he watched his Yankees start off like a whirlwind and end like a dolstrum. Look at the Yankees of 1920 and then raise your little sun-helmet to "Colonel Jake," High Priest of Perserverance!

LEADING THE LEAGUE

The Yanks are leading the American League—not only that, but they are giving every evidence of an ability to "last the distance" and romp home in September well ahead of any of their seven rivals for pennant honors.

Why?

Because "Jake" Ruppert is what Mr. Tom Dorgan ("Tad") would nominate as "a game guy"! Every time the Yankees finished in the cluck the Colonel would step out and buy himself another twinkling star from some other league, or from his own.

The good ones he has hung onto like grim death; the others he has cast aside. Finally he got what he wanted—a string of first-class pitchers, backed up by a galaxy of "fence-busters" the like of which the baseball world has never seen before and will probably never see again.

"LET'S GO!"

Then he said to the other American League club-owners:

"Let's go!"

Look 'em over, boys and girls—look 'em over, and WEEP!

At the top of the Yankee batting list is Roger Peckinpaugh—"Ol' Reliable"—probably the best all-round shortstop in either of the big leagues and, while not a sensational batter, one whom every opposing pitcher fears in a pinch.

Next comes Aaron Ward, the diminutive third baseman, whom Manager Miller Huggins has developed into a worthy successor to "Home Run" Baker, both in the field and at the bat.

Following these two "get-on" boys comes "Wallie" Pipp, a left-handed larruper who causes the right-field bleachers to shiver every time he comes to bat.

"ALONG CAME RUTH!"

And THEN—Oh, THEN! Need we mention his name—this cherubic namesake of the daughter of Naomi who had only cracked out 12 circuit clouts at last report—a new world's record—and the season about half over?

Following "Babe" comes Bobby Meusel—he of whom the New York Times recently said: "American League first basemen are not well-acquainted with Bob Meusel. The big fellow doesn't even hesitate at first on most of his hits!"

Who's next? No less a dumpy, cock-robin personage than our old "fence-busting" friend "Ping" Bodie, who was thrown out of the Pacific Coast League because he kept breaking up the ball-park furnishings—and the ball games—with his Hwang Tumbo. "Ping" is still "pinging" them: and Colonel Jake seems to like it.

"DEL" AND "TRUCK"

Del Pratt, argus-eyed second-baseman and a consistent swat-smith, here injects himself into the picture; following whom we offer for your consideration one "Truck" Hannah, the "big top" of contemporary baseball who, when he connects with a high, fast one, has merely to galumph around four bases while "Murph," in the press box, breaks out a new ball.

Down at the end of the batting order, where they won't be in the way of these demon thrashers, are the pitchers—Jack Quinn, Bob Shawkey, Carl Mays, Ernie Shore Shawkey, Carl Mays, Ernie Shore, Collins and a few others. All they have to do is to keep the opposition from making more than ten or twelve runs—the "clean-up squad" will do the rest!

"OH, YOU YANKEES!"

As an example of the way these rejuvenated Yankees are burning up the American League, consider the game of July 17, played against the one-time invincible Chicago White Sox. Cable advices state that at the end of nine innings, the score was:

YANKEES 20, WHITE SOX 5!

Twenty runs in a big-league contest on a day when the other scores (authentic) were as follows: 2-0, 4-2, 1-0, 3-2, 1-0, 5-2, 3-2, 3-2, 3-1 and 4-2!

Recently, when the Yankees and the Cleveland Indians were battling for first place, the New York assassins registered 14 runs to Cleveland's get-some!

FANS LOVE 'EM

And how the fans love these slugging heroes of the diamond! Gone are the days when "Colonel Jake" and "Cap" (he's been promoted since) Huston, were compelled to gaze sadly over row after row of empty benches, and make new arrangements for over-drafts at the bank.

Today, if you want to see the Yankees play at the Polo Grounds, you have to buy your seats a week or more in advance; and the same thing obtains all over the circuit. The noses of the New York Giants are out of joint; but the scribes and "Colonel Jake" are happy—so what's the odds?

"Jake's Dream"—and it came true!

Local Harrier, Home On Leave, Trains A Winner

Word reached Shanghai recently to the effect that J. M'Kenna, trained by his brother, Sergeant Tom M'Kenna of this city, recently won the Midland counties steeplechase championship in the fast time of 10:56:0, eclipsing the English Olympic trial figures for the distance.

"Sergeant Tom," a member of the Shanghai Harriers' Club, is at present on home-leave. He writes that the steeplechase course was "no easy one," there being four hurdles and a sizable water-jump in each lap.

ROWING CLUB WINS EASILY AT WATER POLO

Defeats S.I.S.C. Eight Goals To One—Big Crowd Out To See The Fun

The attendance of swimming fans last evening at the Rowing Club bath was the largest so far this season, due in great measure to the fact that there was scheduled the first game of the Shanghai Water Polo League.

This match was between the home team and the International Swimming Club. The result was rather an easy victory for the Rowing Club, by eight goals to 1.

The following are the detailed results of the evening's racing, etc:

2 lengths (any stroke).

J. B. Brown (scr.) 2
J. E. Henry (scr.) 3

WATER POLO

Rowing Club: T. R. Macdonald; (goal): R. A. Berthet and A. P. Goldman (backs): R. W. MacCabe (half-back): H. O. Wallin, E. A. Brodie and J. B. Brown (forwards).

S.I.S.C.: C. E. Ozorio (goal): S. Collaco and A. Remedios (Backs): F. Remedios (half-back): C. Encarnacao, E. F. Mears and L. Encarnacao (forwards).

Mr. J. J. Evans refereed for the first half, and Mr. W. Jones for the second half.

THE DETAILS

In the opening moiety Encarnacao, who won the toss from MacCabe, elected to defend the deep end. Play from the start assumed the appearance of vigorous attack by the Rowing Club and Wallin and Brown were both prominent, netting two goals each in this half. The visitors were unable to make any impression on Macdonald, who saved several dangerous shots.

The half-time score thus read: Rowing Club 4 goals, S.I.S.C., nothing.

Against this heavy handicap the visitors played up pluckily in the second section of the game.

They were, however, no match for the Rowing Club men, whose backs took good care of their opponents, and whose forwards played beautifully together.

Wallin, especially, played a star game, and scored twice in this half also. Brown added another and Brodie also beat Ozorio once.

The full-time score was, Rowing Club 8 goals, S.I.S.C. 1 goal.

INTERESTING GAME

It was a very interesting game all through, for though the issue was not long in doubt, the play was of a more even nature than the score indicates. The goal-keeping of Macdonald left little to be desired, whereas Ozorio was not equal to the calls made on him by the Rowing Club forwards, especially Wallin, whose powerful shots elicited frequent enthusiastic applause.

This game gives the Rowing Club a big pull in the 1920 league series for the handsome Ewo Shield.

English Courses An Enigma, Says Hagen

St. George's Hill An Epic In Problem Golf For British Open Title Test.

BY WALTER HAGEN

(Open Golf Champion United States)

London, June 12.—The decision to hold one of the qualifying rounds of the British open championship on an inland course was something never before heard of over here, and led many to remark that the war had upset all of the old traditions in golf the same as in other things.

As I would have to go to St. George's Hill, a course not a great distance from London, for my initial round, I naturally wanted to get a look at it as soon as possible. To be exact, St. George's Hill is only twenty miles from London and is very much crowded on week ends, the same as many of the popular courses around New York. St. George's Hill reminds me very much of Baltusrol. It has the some character of holes and is laid out in much the same way.

It has never been rated as a championship course over here, but the test on such fine greens and magnificent fairways, would in many ways be quite equal to a seaside course. It is not to be considered, so I am told, in the same class with Deal, Sandwich, North Berwick, St. Andrew's, Hoylake or Muirfield. An inland course is never thought of when a championship comes around. This is why the Englishman cannot see how any course in America can be quite as good as the old standbys over here.

The fad of picking out one course for a championship and another for the qualifying round, is an innovation. It will be done in America this coming fall when the amateurs qualify at North Shore on one day, and play at the Engineers' Links on the next day.

My trip to Weybridge, the station nearest St. George's Hill, was made before I had really learned to walk straight again. I'll admit I was a bit wabbly and when I addressed the ball it at times appeared as if I could barely reach it with a ten-foot pole, while at other times during the first few holes the ball felt as if it was right under my nose. If you have never tried to play golf with a pair of sea legs you cannot appreciate fully what this means. Trying to keep an eye on the ball that appears to be moving away from you is a tough proposition. Attempting to hit the little white pill when you are not even certain that you are going to stay on your feet is no small job.

However, the feeling wore off somewhat after I had played half around and I began to take more interest in the game. I would hate to take chances on playing in a championship while I was learning to walk for the second time.

COURSE KEEPS YOU GUESSING

I must describe the course here as many golfers in America will be interested to know that it is the work of H. S. Colt, the well known golf architect, who has visited America and laid out many courses there. He is credited with having begun the work at Pine Valley near Philadelphia, which is rated as one of the best courses, if not the best, in America.

Harry Vardon described the links here very well when he said it was a course that kept you watching and thinking from beginning to end. Every hole is a golf problem that must not be considered lightly if one is to keep the score down to winning figures. It demands that the golfer must always be playing for position and the one that can place the tee shot so that the approach to the green is opened up or at least looks easier, will have the best chance of getting his 4 or his 3. Once off the line a par becomes difficult.

Every experienced golfer knows that a good course should have two long holes and two short ones; two holes not quite as long as the longest and two more holes in the short hole class.

The four short holes at St. George's are faultless. The best of the quartet, I think, is the 160-yard eighth. It is an excellent example of problem golf. For a direct line to the pin, one must play over a high bunker and make the longest carry to the green. Naturally the pros or the best amateurs take this chance without ever thinking of the possibility of a failure, but for the weaker player who cannot carry this far there is a short carry to the right, but getting over at this point means a little pitch and run shot up to the cup, which, of course, cannot always be done without some margin of error.

The shortest hole is the eleventh, and a simple enough affair for the accurate player, as it measures only 110 yards, but, as it is bunkered both fore and aft, the mashie short needs some cut on it to insure the ball staying on the green.

FEATURE OF THE COURSE

The real strength of St. George's lies in a series of holes that measure 400 yards and over, which means two full shots for the ordinary scratch player. Holes of this character favor the long hitter, and it is what every pro delights in. The eight holes will average well over 450 yards. The longest of the set is 525 yards and the shortest 412 yards. While the long hitter has all the best of it, he must keep the ball straight down the fairway, as the rough is close in on either hand to punish the least tendency to slice or pull.

The fairways and greens are all that could be desired of a championship links. If there is one criticism to make it is that they are too perfect, if she a thing is possible. There is a certain pleasure in getting away from the first tee. First holes in golf often seem to be made just to start the round without any thought of adding anything really difficult to the play. The gallery at the first tee can watch the players ahead for some distance, which is always interesting in tournament play.

Unfortunately, after being selected for the qualifying round, St. George's lost its club house by fire. It was rather a serious proposition, but, as it happened a month or so ago, a temporary structure was erected which will serve very nicely for the day. And anyway, as we are going to play on the links and not in the club house, it will not handicap our golf.

BASEBALL GAME MAY BY PLAYED THIS AFTERNOON

"Bolsheviki" And "Irregulars" Scheduled To Exhibit In Series Game

BY VIOLA VERCLAIRE

A ball game between the Shanghai Regulars and the Bolsheviki is scheduled to be played at the Race Course grounds beginning at 5:00 p.m. today.

Whether this game will go down in the book, as one of the series, is a matter of whether enough men show up to constitute two teams.

But Doc. Downs says some kind of a game will be played, and that the fans who come out will not be disappointed, as they were on Tuesday.

Several of the players have been on the sick list, and now it is understood that the heat—or something—has got to "Skipper" Bills, the Regular's shortstop. It is hoped it will not be serious enough to keep him from being in the game tomorrow.

NEED EVERY MAN

The actual fighting force of the Regulars consists of only nine men, and if one of them is missing the "dope" is all upset.

"Trotsky" Dodge says his men are all in fine shape and ready to take another scalp from the "pale-face" Regulars. "Trotsky" says his men will all be there when the five o'clock bell rings; and, if the Regulars show up, he guarantees a killing.

Doc. Downs has been working faithfully on the prospective Tientsin-Dairen series, and in all probability will have something definite to announce in Sunday morning's papers.

It is almost certain that this series will take place, starting about August 21. A few minor details remain to be decided upon in regard to meeting the expenses, etc.

The probable lineup of the two teams today is as follows:

Bolsheviki.—Hopkins, 1b; Merrill, p; Pung, lf; Giauque, c; Covington, ss; Claire, 3b; Busch, 2b; Tinkham, cf and Held, rf.

Regulars.—Ladd, 3b; Porterfield, 2b; Bills, ss; Wilhoit, 1b; Smith, cf; Stovall rf; Holman, c; Lilley, lf and Terry, p.

NOVA SCOTIANS DESPATCH CHALLENGE FOR YACHTING TROPHY; AMERICA PLEASED

Boat Built And Manned By Canadians Will Be Sent After "America's" Cup In 1922—Two Millions Said To Be Needed To Finance Venture

(Reuter's Service)

Montreal, August 2.—Mr. A. C. Ross former member of the Dominion Parliament, has sent a challenge to the New York Yacht Club on behalf of the Nova Scotia Yacht Club, to race for the America's Cup in 1922.

If the challenge is accepted it is proposed that the boat be designed by a British subject, built in Canada and manned by Nova Scotia fishermen. The yacht will be named Maple Leaf. Her cost is estimated at over a million dollars, which will be raised by popular subscription.

NEED MORE MONEY

Halifax, N. S., August 3.—With regard to the challenge issued by Mr. A. C. Ross for the America's Cup in 1922 a representative of the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron declared that the squadron was willing to co-operate with Mr. Ross but he doubted the practicability of raising sufficient funds by popular subscription in Canada. He estimated that Mr. Ross' project would cost nearer two than one million dollars, adding that yaching circles considered that it should be financed by an individual.

WILL BE ACCLAIMED

The announcement that our sister-country, Canada, is to be next challenger for the "America" yacht-race cup will undoubtedly be received with the greatest pleasure throughout the United States.

Without wishing for a moment to deprecate the plucky efforts of Sir Thomas Lipton to annex the famous trophy and take it back to England, the opinion will no doubt be general that it is "somebody else's turn."

Indeed, American yachtsmen would not look forward with particular enthusiasm to another contest against a Lipton boat, for the simple reason that "Sir Tom" is too good a sport to be so consistently and unmercifully beaten; yet he would be the first to protest if every legitimate effort were not made by the Yankees to win.

GOOD BUILDERS

Again, America will be quite happy to cross jibs with her Canadian neighbors; not only because the two countries are on terms of such perfect understanding, but because the Nova Scotians, who are understood to be the prospective designers of the next challenger, are rated as exceptionally fine builders of all sorts of water-craft and can be depended upon to turn out a boat which will be a foeman worthy of Yankee sail.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the Scotians will have no difficulty in raising the necessary funds and promoting the projected race.

S.R.C. Defeats Jap Tennis-men In Close Match

The visiting Japanese tennis players from Keiho University were entertained at the courts of the Shanghai Recreation Club yesterday evening and gave good accounts of themselves, despite the fact that the S.R.C. teams took the three-match series by a score of two matches to one.

A fairly good crowd had assembled when the first match, between Messrs. Komari and Hasotani of Keiho and Messrs. F. W. R. Wilson and J. P. Hawes of S.R.C., began. By the time the tournament had progressed to the third match the Rec grounds were crowded with spectators.

A SPORTING GAME

The Wilson-Hawes team vanquished their opponents in straight sets, although the latter exhibited some very sporting tennis, especially in the first set, which they lost 6-4. The second and third scores were 6-3 and 6-2, respectively.

The second match was between Messrs. Matsubara and Harada, representing the University, and the Brothers Manley, representing S.R.C. The local men took the first set, 8-6, after a hard tussle; but after that the Japanese rallied and ran out the match in straight sets, 3-6, 2-6, 3-6.

SPECTACULAR PLAY

The third and deciding match of the tourney, besides attracting the largest gathering, was easily the most spectacular and hardest-fought of the afternoon. In this contest Messrs. Odakira and Kinura of Keiho were arrayed against Messrs. H. B. Ollerdessen and J. L. Wade, S.R.C.

The Shanghai team lost the first set, which was featured by some very brilliant playing on both sets and was driven to "deuce-all" before the Japanese players ran it out, 7-5. Ollerdessen and Wade then took two sets, 6-2 and 6-4, only to fall down badly on the fourth set, which they lost, 6-1.

A WEARY QUARTET

The final set found the entire foresome well awearied; but they struggled along bravely, making many sensational rallies in the fading twilight. The locals finally managed to pull the set and match out of the fire, 6-4.

The Japanese teams will play several other matches before they leave for home.

Madelung's Millennium

A Danish Writer Startles Europe With His Vision Of The Future

BY HELEN WOLJESKA

"Circus Man," a novel by the Danish writer Aage Madelung, is creating a sensation in Europe. It is a brilliant political satire, depicting the conditions toward which the world is drifting, the "ideal democracy," in which men and women vote, the state owns and distributes all raw material and commodities, poverty and riches alike have been abolished, and everything is regulated, sanitated, expurgated, systematised, standardised and stabilised to the nth degree. We witness the ultimate triumph of the useful and sensible, the triumph of mediocrity. Everything unusual, beautiful, unnecessary, all waste and extravagance have been elliminated. With irresistible efficiency the state succeeds in producing a race of sober, healthy, willing, mediocre, easily manageable workers in accord with the ideal of bees and ants. Meanwhile the artists, poets and musicians flee the country, preferring the swamps of the Amazon to this prosaic paradise. To them, evidently, culture does not mean sanitary plumbing, but a state of mind.

Aage Madelung shows the influence wrought by wowan's political emancipation—how she, Delilah-like, uses her power to cripple her physical enemy, man, but finally is dragged to ruin with him, the state triumphing over both. Woman passes laws prohibiting alcohol, tobacco, gambling, all kinds of "immorality." Prostitution, of course, is made away with. Erotically gifted women of all walks of life are condemned to hard labor. And the land is flooded with secret agents, male and female, for the supervision of morality.

From cradle to grave the life of the citizen of the "Freestate of Midland" is ruled out for him. Clothes, food, drink, dwellings, water, lighting and heat are furnished by the state at uniform prices—and withheld whenever a citizen proves unmanageable. Every child is forced to attend the free schools, in which the necessary business knowledge is acquired and the belief carefully inculcated that his own country and government are "the greatest and best in the whole world." All desire to study foreign and ancient languages or conditions is thoroughly discouraged. This good work, begun by the schools, is later carried on by the press; the public's vanity is flattered its ignorance fostered, so that this ignorance and vanity finally become the strongest of its shackles.

The handful of clever men who form the administration easily use the "rule of the majority," the "political freedom of the masses," to accomplish their own personal ends, establishing a worse tyranny than ever was dreamed of by Caesar or Tsar. Finally the rights and liberties of the "Free Citizens" consist solely in voting for still further laws and rules to chain and exploit themselves. They are worse off than the slaves and serfs of old. But their stupidity saves the situation for them—they are proud and pleased, for are not the laws that bind them of their own "free" choosing?

Into this great circus of life, in which all humanity performs its grotesque antics, comes Peter Man, foundling and circus performer and hero of the book. He dreams of "personal freedom, individual ownership, the right to physical joys and dangers." "Life must be varied, rich in possibilities. . . . that might come true at least in our dreams!" And his motto is, "The Flesh and the Stars!" He is a primitive type, strong, simple, noble, a sort of divine animal, almost a Renaissance hero if it were not for something cold and northern and cumbersome in his nature. One almost thinks of Hamlet when, in the hour of his supreme triumph, as the freed people acclaims him its savior and ruler and his flesh-colored banner with the three stars at last is unfurled, he moodily asks himself: The budding, the fruiting of my work, it is not all the same—all a nothing? The only thing that counts is the dream of a future accomplishment—the ecstasy of conception!"

The women in the book are merely sketched in a quick but poignant style. They are a fascinating company, from the wild, brown circus girl Cleopatra; the sorrowful Anna Stilie, who, in a state breeding house, had nine times been made a mother, nine times borne and nursed a child, only to have it taken from her after a few short months; the passionate "pale girl," would-be suicide and murderess, to that sublimated essence of femininity, culture and art, Dr. Serafima Lewitzky, whose pagan beauty of "moon-white face, blue-black hair and lacquer-red lips, gracefully boyish slenderness sheathed in silver-embroidered black silk against a background of gray and salmon red. . . ." haunts one like a drawing by Alastair.

And the gist of the whole feverish circus performance? Perhaps, like Napoleon Hansa, the old epicure, one would say, bewildered and a little weary: "A heavy and useless undertaking, this demolishing and founding of governments! For mankind remains forever the same—part sheep, part wolf! The only sensible thing to do is for each adept to found his own individual little free state, happy, beautiful and hidden, and there eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we must hence."

It is of course out of the question that an adequate translation of this strange and brilliant book should ever be published for at present our physical and mental food and drink are being censored, expurgated and devitalised according to approved nursery standards, as though the inhabitants were a race of physical and moral defectives, unable to digest the truths and shoulder the responsibilities which the individuals of other nations seem perfectly able to manage. Therefore whoever is interested in "Circus Man" will have to read it in either Danish or German.

MARRIED LIFE

Married Life, Or, The True Romance. By May Edington, Boston: Small, Maynard and Co. $1.75.

Life in London, in that immense section of the people wherein its essential features are much the same in all cities, the section of refined tastes and meagre purses, furnishes the material for May Edington's novel. It begins with the marriage of a pretty, bright, charming girl who has been earning her own living and a fine, handsome young man whose salary in an automobile house has been ample to allow him to spend upon himself with some freedom. The action carries them rapidly through the rose-colored days of the first year of married life. By the end of that year they are both beginning to feel the financial pinch resulting from the necessity of making the salary that had been enough for one serve the needs of two. The wife, dainty and high-strung but conscientious in the discharge of her duties and the shouldering of her responsibilities feeling the physical strain of her constant care of their apartment home. Then the babies begin to arrive and at the end of six years they have three. The salary that had been little more than enough for one has not been much increased and it has to be stretched to cover the needs of five. The husband, under this strain, has grown morose, fault-finding, resentful, and the wife, with her strength taxed far bevond its powers, is weary, irritable and hopeless.

Thus far, the tragedy is one of the commonest in that stratum of life. The author tells this part of her story with much realistic detail and with color and vivacity, although the husband does seem so excessively selfish, self-centered and resentful of his obligation as to make the reader doubt the truth of his portrayal. After she reaches the turning point of her novel Miss Edington deals plentifully in romance and manipulates it to suit her purposes. And so she easily solves the problem of these young people and leaves them in a romantic and rose-colored happiness quite as vivid as that with which she starts them upon their journey. But in so doing she has only frothed up the surface of her problem, the great middle class tragedy, and has not touched at all its foundations and essential factors. Her solution she has found solely in the very material one of furnishing them with enough money to enable the husband to spend as he likes and the wife to hire a maid, get her hands manicured and buy some new clothes. One closes the book wondering what will happen to them when, presently, their desires expand and force their standard of living up another notch or two. The story is the expression of a purely material and selfish ideal of life.

A SOUTH SEA JOAN

Joan Of The Island. By Paul Henry Barbour, and H. P. Holt. Boston: Small, Maynard and Co. $1.75.

There are few things more attractive in an adventure story than a beautiful white girl alone on an island save for a mob of black savages. For this reason doubtless so many authors make this the main feature of tales of peril and exciting episodes in distant corners of the world. We have the girl in this story of the South Seas, and she is blessed with the personal pulchritude, the bravery of a clean-minded, well brought up young woman, with the skill in the use of firearms that are essential to a heroine who is to prove worthy in such an environment. Her name is Joan Trent, and she is living on the island of Tao Tao with her brother, Chester, who is fishing for pearls, in the intervals of managing a large plantation with a number of New Guinea natives working for him. The plantation is not in good condition, and does not promise much profit. But Chester has found some pearls close by, and having claimed the pearl beds by right of priority of discovery, he is hopeful of making a fortune from them. Chester is inclined to drink too much strong liquor, which is primarily the reason Joan is alone on the island, except for the treacherous negroes, when a seafaring man, Keith, is thrown up on the shore and saves Joan from imminent peril at the hands of one of her blacks, Baloo. Keith has swum a few hundred miles, but he is strong enough to hurl Baloo over the veranda rail and thrash him soundly with a whip afterward.

The tale opens with Keith jumping off a vessel, the Four Winds, in the open sea, after killing a brutal Captain Murdock. Keith was an officer on the ship, and we are given to understand he had not reason for slaying the skipper. At all events, he does it, and to save himself from trouble aboard the vessel he plunges secretly into the sea and sets out to swim to land. His desperate swim is well described, and the reader never feels that Keith's experiences are impossible—nor, indeed, wildly improbable. That is one of the excellent qualities of the book—the authors have the gift of presenting extraordinary incidents convincingly. Keith stays on the island, becomes acquainted with Chester Trent, who is a good fellow, in spite of his having had lapses from sobriety, and the three go in for pearl fishing with a will. But there is a Portuguese, Moniz who owns a schooner and is well to do generally, who tries to get the pearl beds away from Chester and his sister. This gives opportunity for much thrilling description of battles along the shore, and between Chester Trent's "ketch," the Kestrel, and Miniz's schooner. Several natives are killed, and the white men are creased by bullets now and then. But in the end the Portuguese loses the fight and we find that Keith is going to marry Joan. This is as good a novel of adventure as has appeared for some time, not only because there is a clean cut story, but on account of the splendid lucidity with which it is related. One need not have a particular leaning toward adventure yarns to enjoy it; it will appeal to anybody who likes a good story per se.

IN THE BAD LANDS

The Lake of Chimney Butte By G. W. Ogden. Frontispiece by P. V. E. Ivory. Chicago; A. C. McClung and Co.

This is a lively tale of adventure and romance of the Old West at its best and its worst, Jeremiah Lambert, nicknamed "The Duke of Chimney Butte"—an itinerant peddler—arrived at the Bad Lands on an old-fashioned, decrepit bicycle. He was selling, or trying to sell, a combination potato parer, apple corer, can opener and tack puller known as the "All-in-One." The "Duge's" welcome at a camp of cow punchers, as they were preparing for their evening meal, was warm—not to say hot. When Jim Wilder presented the Duke with the meanest outlaw pony in the Bad Lands the cowboys expected some fun—and they had it. Later, things began to happen. Lambert was the product of a Western college and something of a tenderfoot, but he soon demonstrated that he could ride and shoot in a way that commanded respectful admiration even in a community where skill with a six-shooter was a first necessity. Lambert was peculiar: he had queer chivalric notions and a keen sense of justice; just the kind of man who would be in hot water most of the time in that lawless land. He secured a job "fence-riding" for Vesta Philbrook—protecting her herds from "rustlers." How, though nearly lured to death, he kept his trust and the reward that came to him in the end at the hands of his lovely "boss" are the pith and marrow of this rapid-fire story.

END OF A DREAM

The End Of A Dream. By A. M. N. Jenkin. New York: John Lane Company.

In this vividly written story of the possible effects of shell shock the author has unfolded a dramatic story of intense interest and downright awful power. Arnold Cheyne, wealthy by inheritance and owner of an English estate, falls in love with a beautiful dancer at a London theater, "La Belle Nadina," who returns his sentiment, but declines to marry him because she feels that she cannot give up the stage. So Cheyne, in due time, marries Sheila Maclaren, a girl of his own class, who has rather advanced ideas on eugenics and similar questions. Her father also is inclined to regard marriage from a utilitarian point of view, and when Arnold confesses to him that Sheila has said that she knows her father "would like her to have a healthy child." Mr. Maclaren insists that Arnold shall be examined by a doctor before consent shall be given for the nuptials. However, it turns out that Arnold is physically satisfactory, and they are married. They do not care for each other particularly, but they are calmly satisfied.

A few months later, Arnold goes to war, and in his first charge is wounded in the head and prostrated by shell shock. The wound is comparatively trifling, but the shock has played a curious prank with his memory. He does not remember Sheila at all, but thinks he is married to Nadina. Sheila is loved by another man, Raymond, and when she goes to the hospital and finds that Arnold does not recognise her, is only slightly disturbed. Then Nadina visits Cheyne in the hospital, and finds that he is convinced she is his wife. He regains his physical strength and slips away one night, going to Nadina's home. She receives him, and seeing that he thinks he is married to her, and being deeply in love with him, allows him to remain. Then they leave London and go down to Cornwall. Here Arnold meets a man who has been pursuing Nadina against her will, and incontinently chokes him to death and hurls him into the sea from the wharf. Going back to his home to Nadina—for they have taken lodgings in this remote Cornish coast village—he uses a hypodermic on his arm, having become a morphia addict. Then he has a dreadful dream, in the course of which he goes again through the action of killing the man whom he had pitched into the harbor. When he wakes, he finds that he has killed Nadina, whose dead body lies by his side, with the marks of his fingers on her white throat.

To show that he has a warrant for the tragedy he describes, the author, in a "Foreword," introduces a doctor, a stockbroker and a lawyer, who discuss shell shock in the intelligent manner of well-informed men. The doctor, replying to a remark of the lawyer that he is "interested to know if there is a possibility that men under the influence of some hallucination, brought on by shell shock, may commit crimes," makes this significant statement:

"A man may become the victim of a strong hallucination, and under its power may do things which in saner moments would never even occur to him. I suggest to you that in dealing with cases of this sore, punishment must not even be considered, and individual instances must necessarily receive separate treatment. . . . As time goes on, I am convinced that there will be serious complications. These complications can be summed up in a single phrase—drugs, drink, murder and suicide. In view of these dangers, I have no hesitation in saying that a man, once a shell-shock victim, should be kept under a superficial observation for at least five years."

So, aside that the story is deeply interesting as a simple work of fiction, there is subject for serious thought in this assertion of the doctor, who may or may not speak with professional authority.

HOW DOCTORS KEEP WELL

Rules They Recommend and Follow.

"Eat enough food, but never too much at any one meal; keep the windows of your living rooms open day and night; take as much exercise as you can in the open air, and be careful to keep your blood in good condition." These are the simple rules of life which most doctors recommend and follow, and which enable them to keep in good health although constantly working in the midst of infection and disease.

The state of the blood is of the first importance, and many men and women know from experience that Dr. Williams' pink pills, the world-renowned blood and nerve tonic, are all that is necessary to keep the blood rich and red and in fit condition to safe-guard the system against ill-health. These pills act directly on the blood, they purify and enrich the blood, and make blood at every dose. It is in this way that they have cured throughout the world during the past thirty years almost countless thousands of cases of anaemia, general debility, indigestion, nervous weakness, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, skin complaints. They are known by women as being the one great remedy for the special ailments of their sex.

If you are run-down, or if you are suffering from any form of ill-health due to vitiated blood or disordered nerves, give Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people a trial at once and see how quickly improvement will follow. They are obtainable from dealers everywhere, or at $1.50 the bottle $8 for six bottles, post free, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

BREAD AND POTATO IS FIRST THOUGHT IN NEW GERMANY

Food Question Blots Out Thoughts Of War—Petty Graft And Theft

RELIEF WORK POPULAR

All Classes Learning English—Population Bitter Against French

BY A. G. GARDINER

Nuremberg, June 10.—In the course of the past month I have travelled some thousands of miles in all parts of Germany, I have mixed in every sort of society. I have met politicians and professional men, university dons and university students, trade union workers and laborers on the land, waiters and cab drivers, journalists and schoolboys, business men and ex-diplomatists. I do not pretend that this justifies any dogmatic expression of opinion about the post-war mind of Germany. The thought and spirit of a great country cannot be gathered in a cursory glance. All that can be offered are some general impressions that may help to form opinion on the subject.

The most emphatic general impression, I think, is that this is not a broken people. By this I do not mean that they are not a beaten people, or that they do not know that they are a beaten people. They know it very well. They are reminded of it in all the impoverished circumstances of their lives, in their vanished mercantile marine, their stagnant industry, their hungry conditions, the crushing burden of prices and taxation. But they are not broken in spirit as the Austrians are broken. They are not hopeless. They still keep a stiff upper lip and are confident of their future.

BITTER TOWARD FRENCH

"The old life is ended for me and my generation," said the President of one of the Chambers of Commerce to me after talking of former English friends whom he had met in the polo field in England, at Murren, in Egypt, and other places where the rich disport themselves. "The old life is ended for. We have motor cars, but we cannot use them. We cannot even play tennis. My daughters used to buy a dozen good balls for twelve marks. Yesterday I bought a dozen bad balls for 350 marks. We can no longer afford these things. We have to live poor for the rest of our days, but we shall pay off our debts. We shall begin afresh at the bottom. We have a big task before us, but we shall do it if we are allowed to work. But we must be permitted to work. We cannot both be idle and pay."

That, I think, represents the general frame of mind. It is subdued but it has not lost its morale. It is occupied with the hard facts of life, and has neither time nor disposition for external politics. There is only one topic, and that is "bread and potatoes." The problem of food has obliterated the war. There is little talk of revenge, and little apparent hostility. Nowhere have I experienced anything but civility, and this, I believe, is the universal experience of Englishmen, and equally of Americans.

So far as bitterness exists, it is directed against the French, and this not owing to the war, but to events since the war. I do not think any incident has rankled so deep a barb in the heart of Germany as the French occupation of Frankfort with black troops. One of the chief officials of the trade unions at Berlin told a representative of the American Relief Mission that that calculated insult had done infinite mischief among the working men, who are wholly anti-militarist, but who have been stung by it to thoughts of revenge.

WANTS TO GO TO AMERICA

Something of the mind of the young German of the poor about the future was disclosed to me by the lift boy in the hotel I stayed at in Leipzig. He was a bright youth in buttons, who was obviously eager to try his few words of English on any one who came to hand. In reply to the question how he was learning English, he said he was taking lessons twice a week, and the conversation proceeded something like this:

"Who teaches you?"

"An Englishman who has lived in Leipzig for twenty years."

"What do you pay him?"

"Six marks a lesson, or twelve marks a week."

"That is a lot of money."

"Yes, it is a lot of money, but I think it is worth it. I get seventy marks a week, out of which I must feed and clothe myself and pay for lodgings. I spend ten marks a week on my washing."

"Why are you learning English?"

"For two reasons, firstly because it is necessary in the hotel trade even in Germany as soon as Americans and English begin to come, and secondly because I want to go to America."

"And not to England?"

"No, not to England. No German can dare to go to England. The English hate us too much. England wants to keep Germany always on the ground. It is different with America."

"Do you hate England?"

"I like the Englishmen who come here, but since their country hates mine I cannot be expected to like it."

"And France?"

"Ah, every one hates France. Even the workingmen hate France."

"Do many people in Leipzig learn English?"

"Lots are doing so. Many boys and girls attend the English classes at the night schools. The, think it will be useful to them later. All the under waiters and many of the page boys in this hotel are learning English."

"And the maid servants?"

"Fewer of them, but there are some who are."

THREE DINNERS A WEEK

"Do you find it difficult to live on your wages?"

"A great struggle. I can only afford three dinners a week. And then I must pay at least six marks for a dinner. I get potato soup, fish, or an egg. For breakfast I have two pieces of bread and coffee, and for supper two more pieces."

"And at midday on the days when you cannot afford dinner?"

"Then I have only bread."

"Never mind, better times will come. A little more patience."

"More patience? That is what we have heard for eighteen months. A German can no longer lift his head. Our humiliations are too great."

The lift-boy's pursuit of knowledge and of English is symptomatic of young Germany. The war has stimulated rather than checked the traditional enthusiasm for learning. I met in succession three University students and discovered incidentally that each of them was taking an English thesis for his degree—one the philosophy of Hobbes; one the teaching of William Morris; the third the period of Cromwell. Intellectual interest in England was never greater and its prestige, though badly hit by the post-war blockade and the "English sickness" that has devastated the child life of the country, is extraordinarily high.

But if any country can be said to be popular, it is America. It had fallen into disrepute owing to the failure of the Wilson peace policy at Paris, but its enormous relief work has restored respect for its heart if not for its head.

TIPPING A NECESSITY

There has been much exaggeration as to the moral deterioration due to the war. Crime has of course increased, but not more than in other countries. Indeed there are fewer crimes of violence relatively than in England. But there is a plague of petty theft due to the famine in ordinary commodities. I saw a pair of boots before a bedroom door at a Nurnberg hotel this morning. It was the first time I had seen so daring an invitation to the marauding spirit. Even in the best hotels clients are warned not to leave boots outside the bedroom door. With boots at anything from £15 to £30 a pair the risk is intelligible. They are more sought after than precious stones. Clothes of any sort are only safe under lock and key, and the theft of stair carpets, rugs and furniture is a common-place of daily life.

The ravages of profiteering and the difficulty of living have swept away the familair standards of conduct even in official circles and if you want to get anywhere or do anything you must be prepared to bribe and tip royally. In all the hotels you will find exhibited the caution against "trinkgeld," for under the new law by which the waiters, like everyone else, work only eight hours a day, the payment of the waiter is included in the bill, but so far from tips being abolished they have assumed a more lavish scale.

The confusion and ferment of a world in social and political dissolution have their counterpart in the intellectual unrest and disorder of the time. No authoritative voices have emerged from the welter of the war, and the arts are a chaos of feverish experiment and agitation. All censorship has vanished, and the bookstalls are flooded with pornographic stories, worthless as literature, and worse than worthless in morals. There are a few choice spirits, but they are silent for their souls' sake. When the tumult subsides they will be heard again. But the tragedy of the country has been written in blood and has so far found no imaginative vehicle of expression, comparable, for example, with the productions of Barbusse or Duhamel in France.

SHAKESPEARE A FAVORITE

The old masters of the stage have not added to their stature. Hauptmann's new play, founded on Cortes's conquest of Mexico, is a fine pageant, but poor drama. It attracts crowds to Max Reinhardt's new theater, built since the war, and fashioned like a vast grotto. Strauss's new opera is of unconscionable length, and almost unmitigated dullness. Wedekind's queer and unpleasant plays, no longer suppressed by the censor, suit the intellectual mood of the time, and all the pathological dramatists, Strindberg, Gorky, Ibsen, and the rest are largely acted. There are no fewer than three plays of Bernard Shaw being acted in Berlin. But in spite of the general disintegration, Shakespeare still holds his place, and you may see one or other of his plays in almost any city you go to.

In every direction "expressionism" is defiantly challenging all the accepted decorums of art. It has even invaded the cinema and been wedded to the film with extraordinary effect in "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari." I have seen nothing so strange, original and powerful on the screen, and I venture to predict a sensational success for it in other countries. It seems to open up new possibilities for the cinema much beyond anything yet achieved in the banal productions with which American film producers have made the world familiar.

The extravagances of "expressionism" in painting exceed the wildest escapades of our X Group. The "Ovists" are the latest experimenters with the grotesque and the ugly, and, after cubes, lots and circles, all nature is discovered to be egg-shaped. The portrayal of the naked and the unashamed in aggressive unloveliness is the dominant phase, and a certain brutality is the prevailing spirit of art. Civilisation has suffered shipwreck and anything that breathes its traditions is derided. Back to nature and the bare, brutal truth of primitive things is the only imaginative impulse that is respected, and the "Da Daists" who babble in arts like infants trying to fashion their first words are seriously gazed at as the prophets of a new order.

OLD SYSTEMS ARE GONE

Blot out the whole of this crazy world that has tumbled to ruin, and begin again—no spelling but phonetics, no music but that of toy drums, trumpets and cymbals, no painting but such as a three-year-old child might conceive. It is all symptomatic of the enormous disillusion that the war has left behind. The old systems have gone, like a bubble blown by a child in the sunlight, and the intellectual world seethes with a passionate repudiation of the past and with a frenzied demand for new forms in which to mould the future. The wise are waiting and hoping, confident of the new vision that is coming to birth.

But behind this intellectual ferment and extravagance there is the sense of something vast, stable and unsensational, a great, industrious people, little concerned about theories of "isms," but profoundly concerned about bread and potatoes, and anxious above everything to work. For the last three days I have been travelling through the pleasant Bavarian countryside, where over the far-spreading landscape bare-footed women and children (especially women) may be seen bending in the hot sunshine over their tasks, weeding, housing, scything, carrying heavy burdens, laboring ceaselessly far into the dusk.

It is a widely different people from that of the industrial North. Catholic, pastoral, primitive and reactionary, but it is like the people of the North in its industry, its thoroughness, and its fundamental honesty. I am not expressing my own view only, but the view of every Englishman I have met out here, whether journalist, soldier or civilian official, in saying that it is a people that commands respect and confidence.

PROPAGANDA OF HATE

It is, indeed, from the lips of English officials, both military and civil, that I have heard the most emphatic condemnation of the continuance of the ostracism of Germany. It was an English soldier of great authority who denounced most bitterly the subordination of English policy to the short-sighted hysteria of French Chauvinism. It is English Consuls who have most indignantly contrasted the civility and friendliness shown to Englishmen here with the humiliating fact that it is still impossible for German business men to get a night's lodging in London. One of these men, a German representative of an English firm, found every hotel he went to closed to him and finally was provided with a bed at a neutral legation. It was another English officer of distinction engaged in important work in Germany who, referring to these things, asked:

"Is the war over or is it still going on?

"This propaganda of hate is contrary to our tradition. We have not hitherto been in the habit of kicking people when they are down." And it was another British Consul who said to me, "I am told to foster trade relations between the two countries and when I carry out my instructions I find that German traders whom I have helped to go to England are treated like lepers, when they got there."

There is in certain English quarters a deliberate intention of keeping the two peoples apart, and I have heard much comment in English circles in Germany on the suppression in a certain English newspaper of articles by its own correspondent because they did not express the hostile spirit of the paper itself. I am satisfied that if the government, instead of taking its cue from a malignant press at home, will consult the men on the spot, military no less than civil, the men who know the facts and see the needs, there will soon be a change for the better in British policy and temper. Nothing will be done until the civilities of international life are restored.

AN ULTIMATUM

"I want a Tibetan Fox Skin and that's all there is to it. Why Lilly has a Tibetan Fox Skin and you should see the difference between it and the other fox skins. If you don't go to the Chinese Post Office and buy a money order for $25 and mail it at once to Mr. Elly Widler, Ta Tsing-Lu, Szechwan Province, I shall never speak to you again. Now here's a kiss and be a good boy and don't forget to write to Widler for that fox skin."

There is no other skin like a Tibetan Fox Skin.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

F. GERALD BLATTNER, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."
J. S. ALEXANDER, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed Castoria to families for several years. It is all right. Mothers like it, for children will take it without any trouble."
C. A. WILSON, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Have used your Castoria on various occasions in suitable cases and have found it a palatable and efficient laxative, especially in the various diseases of childhood."
CHAS. EDWARD GARDINER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have to Kaufmann in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

VERDICT OF LABOR SUITS BRITISH DRYS

Latter Rejoice Over Vote Of Party Against State Control Of Liquor Trade

London, June 26.—The local "pussyfoots" are today drinking healths in lemon pop because of the overwhelming vote of the Labor Party conference at Scarborough yesterday in favor of local option, reversing its former sympathetic attitude toward state purchase of the liquor trade.

The conference first turned down a resolution for state, purchase by a vote of 1,672,000 to 1,352,000; then defeated a Prohibition amendment 2,603,000 to 472,000, and finally passed Philip Snowden's local option resolution by a vote of 2,003,000 to 623,000.

The United Kingdom Alliance the British equivalent to the Anti-Saloon League, which has been denouncing state purchase, as a reactionary measure against Prohibition, is delighted at the local option vote, and says it is neither surprised nor discouraged at the defeat of the Prohibition resolution.

However, both the Prohibitionists and the Laborites point out that thousands of the labor votes for local option were given by men who would vote for more drink if they got the chance but who believe in giving local communities the right to decide the question for themselves.

The big vote against state purchase comes as a severe blow to such drink reformers as Lord and Lady Astor, who believe state purchase a necessary drink reform and preliminary to ultimate Prohibition. They are both interested in the experiment of Government ownership of the drink trade now being conducted at Carlisle, and it is therefore of added significance that Snowden, who is a member of the Liquor Control Board, which runs the Carlisle business, and who formerly was a staunch advocate of state purchase, yesterday moved the local option resolution, and denounced the Carlisle experiment, which, he said, apparently with the reverse of pride, had earned 30 percent profits for the first year, and produced an unenviable record of prosecutions for drunkenness.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows in their report dated August 4:

Exchange:—The London price of Silver at 57d. is 1½ higher than last week. The fall in the New York-London cross-rate from 3.79 to 3.63½ would partly account for the rise in London as we understand the silver markets are quiet. With very little export paper offering our exchange rates have risen 3d. to 5/8 (T.T. on London), the rise is the result of continued sale of speculative T.T. on London by our native Gold Dealers at rates running from 2½d. to 3½d. above the official quotation. The continuation of this feature is the reason for our "Buying rates" being quoted "Nominal"—rather than from any shortage of money or rush of bills offering. The Market closed strong under these conditions.

Local stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 33,200,000 a decline of Tls. 2,800,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $21,000,000 a decline of $200,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 48,500,000 a decline of Tls. 2,950,000.

Hongkong Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their report dated July 30:

Since the date of our last circular money has eased considerably, but the effect has not been fully reflected so far in the share market, the higher exchange having depressed some of our leading stocks.

London continues dull and lifeless through fear of dearer money and French liquidation. Hongkong Bank shares are quoted £114 middle price in London, with probable sellers at £117, which latter figure includes the cost of transfer. Shells have done at £6. 15. ex dividend and rights.

In Shanghai, Docks appear to be firmer and business has been done at Tls. 143 and Tls. 144 for cash with Tls. 150 done for September.

The following are the most noteworthy alterations since last week:

Hongkong Banks:—Owing to higher exchange have fallen to a selling rate of $630.

Docks:—Have changed hands at $148 to $149.

Unions:—Are wanted at $182½ but sellers are holding for higher rates.

Shanghai Docks:—Are indicated above, have advanced to Tls. 143 for cash.

China Sugars:—Have been done at $229 and $230 for cash closing with buyers at $231.

Wharves:—Have changed hands at $84 and Cements are in demand at $7.15 after sales at $7.30.

Exchange.—The demand selling rate on London is 4/-¼ and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 71⅜.

No. 2715.

SHANGHAI MUNICIPAL COUNCIL 6 PER CENT. STERLING LOAN, 1920.

Amount £750,000

Price of Issue £100 per cent.

UNDER the authority of Resolution VII passed at the Annual Meeting of Ratepayers on April 7, 1920, the Council hereby invites applications for Bearer Debentures (with coupons attached) in the 6 percent. Sterling Loan of 1920, which is issued on the following terms:—

(1) Debentures to Bearer, with Sterling interest coupons attached, will be issued at £100 percent in denominations of £1,000, £500, £100 and £50.

(2) The Debentures of this issue will bear interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum, payable on June 30 and December 31 in each year by sterling demand draft on London at par, or in silver (local currency) at the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation's Shanghai current demand buying rate on London on date of presentation of the relative coupon. The first payment of interest will be made on December 31, 1920.

(3) Applications, accompanied by payment in full, will be received by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, No. 12 The Bund, on and after May 1, up to and including June 30, 1920, the Council reserving to itself the right of closing the subscription lists on any day previous to June 30, 1920, by Notification in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai.

(4) Payment on application will be accepted in Silver (local currency) at the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation's current selling T.T. rate on London and will bear interest from date of payment, or in Sterling by T.T. or Demand Draft on London. Interest on payments made in Sterling will only accrue from the date on which the relative remittances are received by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, London.

The cost of all telegrams involved through payment by Sterling T.T. shall be paid by the applicant.

Payment will be acknowledged by Banker's Receipt pending issue of the Debentures.

In the event of any applicant not being allotted the full amount applied for, the amount over-applied for will be repaid in full, plus interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the date payment was received in Shanghai or London to the due date of repayment in Shanghai, as notified to the applicant by special notice from the Council.

(5) The Loan will be redeemed at par on June 30, 1950, but may be redeemed by the Council in whole or in part on June 30, 1930, and/or on any subsequent date or dates on which the half-yearly interest is payable, subject to the Council giving six calendar months' notice in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai. In the event of any partial redemption of the loan the numbers of the Debentures to be redeemed will be decided by drawing. The numbers of such drawn Debentures will be notified in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai not less than three months prior to the date of repayment.

How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filing with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

Our Visitors

TO the distinguished representatives of the American Congress who arrive here today, and to their wives, daughters, aunts and nieces, not forgetting for a moment the lone chaperone, we offer on behalf of the American community a hearty welcome. We are sorry that conditions both at home and out here have necessitated changes in the itinerary, which render it impossible for many members of the party to remain with us more than a couple of days, but a busy program has been arranged for them, and we feel sure that by tonight they will know volumes about Shanghai which they didn't dream last night.

The visitors, after seeing Manila and Hongkong had planned a tour through China and afterwards a visit to Japan. But the unsettled situation up North makes the trip to Peking hazardous and the political situation at home has become so exciting that many members of the party feel that, inasmuch as they cannot visit the capital, their duty is to get home as speedily as possible and save the country from going completely to the dogs.

Some of the visitors will make side trips to Soochow, Nanking and Hangchow, it is understood, and a few will remain in the East for several weeks more, but the majority will have to go from here to the States direct, thus missing Japan altogether.

The Chinese and American communities here however are all set for two big days with the Congressmen and their families, and enough will be crowded into that short period to last them through the trip home at least. All are sorry they are unable to remain longer this time and the hope is expressed that they will all be in the next Congress and so be able to arrange another and lengthier trip to China.

Dr. Paul S. Reinsch who served so brilliantly as American Minister to Peking throughout the trying period of the war is with the party and we join the community in making him specially welcome.

BLAMES GIRL STUDENTS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir.—I was very much pleased to read Miss Kwei's opinion and some of the replies. The subject of this dicussion is truly very important. But now I should like Miss Kwei to know that she must not only talk about the wrong doings of the boy students and omit those of the students of her own sex. Perhaps she has not noticed that people generally dispute about the faults of others while they themselves also commit faults. I will explain my own views in order to try to induce all the students of her own sex to control themselves hereafter and keep pace with the boy students in the improvement they obtain from Western civilisation.

Most girl students on getting a little western knowledge regard themselves as well-educated and highly cultured ladies. They pay no attention to their home affairs, their children and all the duties of a woman; and do no work in society (some do, but alas, very few). This is not because of their wisdom, but because they are too lazy to do their regular work and prefer to gamble and to discuss useless plans for getting more freedom.

They learn Western knowledge, but they do not use it properly; that is why they cannot get as much freedom as the western women. And it is generally of no use to learn a foreign language while one's own national education is not complete. But, as Miss Kwei says, Chinese homes are to be improved only by the Chinese in a Chinese way, and by some good points of the foreign homes, not by entire adoption of foreign methods.

As to their mode of dressing they are also changing the form of their clothes to that of foreigners' little by little, high heels, short skirts, short sleeves, bare necks and small coats. They are also very fond of talking a foreign language, as if they want to shame those who do not understand it.

They take the rights of marriage from their parents; this is very good, but some of them are very impatient at living with their husbands through their whole lives. So separations and second marriages have been frequently seen since they have their own rights of marriages. (There was no law of separations in former times in China).

They choose their husbands on several conditions the most general one of which is that the candidates for their hands must be returned students, or something of that sort. Hardly any of them would like to have a husband who is deficient in foreign languages even though he is well educated in Chinese. If any of them has such a husband, she will despise him very much and will think that her companions may laugh at her.

Most parents do not want their sons to be married to foreign educated girl students, because they have seen the unfortunate experiences of some families. Some of these girls even blame their parents-in-law and break the rules of the family. They do not understand what kind of freedom foreign women truly have and what work they truly do.

There are some examples of this which I have seen. My reason for writing this article in English is just the same as Miss Kwei's. Yours sincerely,

CHENG CHIEN,
Shanghai High School.

Nature Notes

BY JOHN BURROUGHS

1 Does a "Northeaster" storm really come from that direction?

A northeaster storm does not come from that direction. A northeaster in one place may be an easter, a norther, or a souther in some other locality. See through those drifting drenching clouds that come hurrying out of the northeast, and there are the bosscloud above them, the great captains themselves, moving serenely on in the opposite direction.

2 Is the song of the bobolink the same in different localities?

I have noticed that the bobolink does not sing the same in different localities. In New Jersey it has one song; on the Hudson, a slight variation, the same; and on the high grasslands of the interior, quite a different strain—clearer more distinctly articulated, and running off with more sparkle liltingness.

3 When will a calf play "possum"?

After the calf is several hours old and has got upon its feet and had its first meal, the dam by some sign commands it to lie down and remain quiet while she goes forth to feed. If the calf is approached at such time, it plays "possum," pretends to be dead or asleep till, on finding this ruse does not succeed, it mounts to its feet, bleats loudly and fiercely, and charges desperately upon the intruder.

LINES FROM LETTERS

Dear Mutt: The invasion of China! A big party of Americans will arrive today. Most of them are members of Congress, and those who are not are sisters, uncles, cousins, aunts—and there is one chaperon. So far as I can see they will spend most of their time eating and drinking. They put America 'bone dry, and then they left it. Shush! They will eat at the Oriental Hotel, at the Astor and at the Carlton. Loganberry juice is not the only liquid that can be purchased at these places. Some of them are already booked to talk, and so I expect the calorific ether that they produce will send the temperature still higher. Among the uninvited guests at the various receptions will be scissor grinders, bats, mosquitoes and Yours to a cinder.

The Great Work Of Co-Ordinating All Forms Of Resource-Energy

BY DR. LOUIS LEVINE
(New York World)

Our industrial problems are serious enough today, but even greater complications seem in store for us in the near future. The most threatening problem which is looming up on the industrial horizon is the shortage of motive power. This is the opinion not of any one man, but of all those who deal with the mechanics of industry. The American Society of Mechanical Engineers gave the matter serious thought at its spring meeting in St. Louis and organised a special fuels section to examine the various phases of the question. Walter N. Polakov, Chairman of the Organisation Committee of the section, believes that the problem is far more serious than is generally conceded and that the future of our industrial civilisation is at stake.

"Most of us fail to realise," said Mr. Polakov, "to what extent our industrial system depends upon mechanical power. The work done annually in the United States by coal, natural gas, oil and water power would require the labor of at least three billion slaves working by hand. The development of these natural resources has made every man, woman and child in the United States the master of thirty slaves. This is absolutely and proportionately more than the people of the South had at their command even in the palmiest days of slavery.

"Still, our industrial system calls for a large supply of human labor to supplement the work of our mechanical slaves. Much of the work performed by human effort is still of a low order. It is 'dirty work' in the literal sense of the term. One of the great questions before society is how to reduce this distasteful work to a minimum. We have depended a good deal until now upon the low paid and uneducated masses of economically backward countries to do this work for us. The great political and social changes in Europe may cut off this source of supply, and unless we are willing to thrust into our midst millions of Asiatics and Africans, we must find new means of replacing human labor by mechanical power.

"But this is only one side of the medal. We must also look at the other side. While we find the hard and unpleasant work more and more irksome, we demand an ever greater remuneration for whatever work we do. Our workers will not relinquish their claim to a progressively higher standard of living, and American industry must meet this claim. This can be done only by increasing production. The human factor in industry must be made more effective through the increased use and efficiency of the mechanical means. More machines, better machines, greater industrial coordination, quantity production imposed upon us by the nature of our industrial mode of living.

"There is no reason to doubt the capacity of the human mind to meet this need. The mechanical genius of the race shows no signs of deterioration either in fertility or brilliancy. The mechanical inventions of the past decade are as striking and as revolutionary as those that preceded them. The trouble lies in another direction. We have been so busy inventing mechanical appliances for the utilisation of our natural resources that we have forgotten about the sources of energy. We have used our coal and gas and oil as if they were inexhaustible. They are not. Nature has been generous in supplying us with resource-energy, especially in the United States. But the bounty of nature has its limits. We have exploited our resource-energies without thought for the future. The result is critical. As our industrial development calls for more and more energy and our social advance depends upon cheap energy, our supplies of energy are reaching the point of exhaustion."

"Is this true of all forms of motive power?"

"It is true of coal, gas and oil, which are the foundations of industry. The deposits of anthracite coal have already been exhausted in a number of mines and will probably not last more than 20 years in other mines. Our oil resources, according to the Bureau of Mines, will be exhausted in twenty years. Our natural gas is also being used up at a rapid rate. If we go on at our present pace, and with our present methods of exploitation, we shall have destroyed the basis of our industrial system in less than a century. We may find ourselves in the position of the man who in the middle of the road suddenly discovers that his car has run out of gasoline."

"What is the way out?"

"We must change our present methods of exploiting our natural resources and develop new and more efficient methods. If we apply the same amount of thinking and planning to this problem as we have applied to mechanical invention we shall not fail to solve it. What is needed is a broad policy based upon a comprehensive plan of co-ordinating all forms of resource-energy in the country. We may have to discard some of our old ideas and favorite notions in order to achieve this end, but there can be no choice in the matter.

"I may illustrate this general idea by examining specifically the sources of energy. Take bituminous coal for instance. Our mining methods have been very defective. The majority of the coal mining companies are small and financially weak, employ obsolescent methods, and enter upon new developments but slowly. The coal which is expensive to mine is usualy sacrificed, and only the coal that can be cheaply mined is taken out. The coal lost in dusts or sacrificed in narrow and expensive veins probably amounts to half of the coal produced to date. Here is a problem of wastage which demands serious attention. Every competent student of the question has come to the conclusion that economical mining of bituminous coal is impossible under competitive conditions. The price of coal should be adjusted to the mining costs of different mines and different parts of a mine; and this requires that the industry be conducted as a co-ordinated and highly organised enterprise.

"Consider again the waste of coal in manufacturing processes. Roughly, 20 percent of our soft coal is used to make coke. Out of one ton of coal delivered at the steel mills, usually about 1,200 pounds of coke is obtained. About 40 percent of the coal in weight is lost because the process is carried on in the antiquated beehive ovens, instead of in the highly efficient, modern by-products ovens. The loss to society in by-products is enormous and has been estimated at $1,000,000,000 a year. But aside from these losses, there is a complete wastage of about 8 percent of all the soft coal mined in the United States.

"Our industrial processes are so intertwined that it is hard to discuss them separately. One cannot examine the coal and general fuel situation without coming at once to the problem of transportation. Public utility commissions and railroad wage boards may go on holding hearings till doomsday. They will not find an answer to the perplexing transportation question unless they grasp that transportation and fuel and resource-energy are merely different phases of one general problem. Consider the effect of our coal mining methods upon the railroads. Some 30 percent of all railroad freight in the United States is coal, which is transported in bulk from the mines to manufacturing plants, central power stations, etc. At present this coal is mixed with ashes and slate and contains a good deal of water. The coal is not concentrated at the mine because it is sold by weight, and it is more profitable to charge for the water and the rock as much as for the coal. As a result, the country uses at least 20 percent more transportation facilities in the shipment of coal than would be necessary if the coal were concentrated.

"Bad methods of mining thus cause railroad congestion. But there is a counter effect. Congestion on the railroads clogs the mining of coal. During the war, 30 percent of idle time in the coal mines was caused by lack of transportation facilities. A year ago the percentage rose to forty, and now it is about forty-six. President Smith of the New York Central recently declared that some $700,000,000 was required to build enough coal cars to move coal in adequate quantities and with desirable promptness to manufacturing plants. Counting 6 percent for interest on the investment and 15 percent for depreciation and maintenance, this means an additional charge of $140,000,000 on the American people. Our railroad executives say that they need some $6,000,000,000 to put the railroads on a basis of efficient service. In interest alone this would amount to an annual charge of $360,000,000. For some reason or other our railroad managers ignore the fact that this would be enough to electrify the main railroad lines of the country, which would mean great economy. A steam locomotive today uses only 5 percent of its coal effectively. The track equipment today is used only 1 percent of time, or about fifteen minutes during the day. The locomotives are used in pulling freight only 11 percent or about three hours out of every twenty-four. All of us pay for this waste in high transportation rates and inadequate service. Electrified railroads would be by far more efficient. An electric locomotive uses coal more than twice as effectively, is twice as economical, pulls a longer train of cars, and can make twice as many trips per unit of time. Electric track equipment could be used three to seven times more during the day. All this means more work with less man-power, in other words economy all around.

"But electrification is just one item in a larger program. We must relieve the railroads of as much bulk as is possible. We cannot much longer avoid the question of how to transport our coal to the places where it is needed. We must cease shipping coal in bulk and transmit it in the form of electric energy. Electricity is energy without bulk. It can be transported by wires with low loss and can be applied to any use—heat, light and chemical. This implies a revolution in our mining industry, but it is inevitable. The British Reconstruction Commission, under Viscount Haldane, reached the same conclusion for England. There is no doubt that all countries in which modern industrialism is growing rapidly will have to adopt the same course."

"Mr. Polakov," I interposed, "assuming that all these recommendations were carried out, it would mean a saving of some 20 to 30 percent of the coal resources. Let us assume that we may save 50 percent but this merely postpones the crisis for a short time, especially if our other sources of mechanical power will be exhausted within a generation. How do you engineers propose to meet this difficulty?"

"My idea," said Mr. Polakov, "is that we must first get the maximum service out of each natural resource. Take petroleum, as another example. Petroleum is a migratory mineral. It moves underground in the direction of decreased pressure. It will gush forth wherever there is a chance for it regardless of the ownerships of the surface. Under competitive conditions, small operators owning small tracts must scramble to produce oil quickly. Otherwise one man's oil might be sucked out from under his feet by the other fellow. As it costs a lot to reach oil and comparatively little to produce it, there is every inducement to produce rapidly and to sacrifice all but the easily obtainable values. The waste of this resource under such free operation of competitive and private exploitation is enormous, and the great fortunes made by a few individuals cannot compensate for the great loss to society. A rational program of exploitation would stop this waste and thereby prolong the life of this important resource.

"But in addition we must correlate the use of all our natural resources in a general system of exploitation. For instance, if we electrified our railroads and transformed our coal at the mines into electric energy, we could hitch it up with our hydraulic power and effect still greater savings. We could divide the country into great zones in which the various sources of energy were brought under central supervision and used to supplement each other according to the needs of industry, seasons of the year, climatic and geographic conditions. In this way we could make each resource yield its utmost and all sources of energy work in harmonious and economical correlation.

"This is a vast program which implies changes in legislation, in business methods and in the mental attitude of the people. Much educational work will have to be done before the ground is prepared for its realisation. This is the main purpose of our Committee of Publicity and Information. We propose to collect and study the facts, work out the details of the program and submit our results to all people who may be interested. Our society has such well known experts as David Moffat Mayers, former adviser to the United States Fuel Administration; Prof. L. P. Brekenridge, G. F. Gebbard, and many others. We shall prosecute our task as vigorously as possible. The American people cannot ignore the problem very much longer. The continued existence of our industrial civilisation is in the balance."

Wilson Offered Many Positions

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson, on leaving the White House, will have the opportunity of taking any kind of a position that he wants. Every day there comes to the Executive Mansion numbers of offers that include just about every kind of a job there is in existence.

He is known to have been offered the leadership of a score of big universities, and hundreds of newspapers are more than willing to have him at almost any salary he might name, and last, but not least, more than one film corporation has made tentative offers for his services in moving pictures.

Admiral Grayson, his physician, said today that he knew nothing of a reported offer from the University of the Philippines of a salary $50,000 to $100,000 a year to the President to serve as its head.

"Just what the President will do after his retirement no one can say at this time," Dr. Grayson declared. "The chief concern of every one about him is to make him well as quickly as possible."

Washington was agog last night as the result of a widely circulated report that President and Mrs. Wilson had visited a local bank, and that the President had walked in and out of the institution without aid. Anywhere from 300 to 600 persons declared positively that they personally had seen the President, and refused to believe the positive announcement from the White House that Mr. Wilson had not left house during the day.

Inquiry at the bank developed the fact that Mrs. Wilson had called, and that she had been escorted to and from the White House car by her brother, Mr. Bolling, who in many ways resembles the President.

'GENTLEMEN DON'T FIGHT'

(From the Outlook)

Col Jack Chinn, a typical Kentuckian of the old bowie knife school, recently died. His fighting code was simple and had an element of humor. "A man should fight," he is reported as saying, "if he is attacked by a scrub; he should fight if the honor of his home is at stake; he should fight if a woman or a weaker man is being 'put upon.' I have followed that rule always and I have done a lot more fighting for other people that for myself. I would never use a knife on a gentleman. Gentlemen should never fight, they can settle their differences by a decent, gentlemanly kind of arbitration."

How Average Man, Unlearned In Forestry, May Distinguish Between Different Sorts Of Trees—Each Type Has Own Little Peculiarities

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

(Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest)

It is a great delight and often a great advantage to know the trees by their names. This knowledge adds surprisingly to the pleasure of a trip through the country, as well as to that of residence in a neighborhood where trees are abundant. Yet many an inhabitant of the country, to say nothing of city dwellers, is ignorant of the names or kinds of trees that he sees around him on all sides. "What's in a name?" A great deal in this case—and in most cases. The name is a key to knowledge and a spur to observation.

How do you tell an oak from a pine? By noticing the difference in their general appearance, their characteristic shape, the set of their branches, the form, size arrangement and color of their leaves, etc. In this particular case the differences are so wide that a single glance fixes them in the memory, and no confusion can ever afterward arise.

But how do you tell a sugar maple from a silver maple or soft maple? Here there must be a training of the eye based upon considerable observation. Differences of outline, set and color of the leaves, differences in the appearance of the bark, differences in the size and shape of the "keys," or winged fruits—all these and other details must be learned, and in becoming familiar with them you have a pleasurable and beneficial exercise of the faculty of attention.

No one would think it not worth while to learn to distinguish between these two kinds of maple trees after being told that the sugar maple, or hard maple, is one of the most valuable, and the soft or silver maple one of the least valuable of American woods.

Besides its delicious sugar-making sap the hard maple (sometimes called "rock maple") furnishes excellent fuel, if one can afford to burn it, much potash from its ashes, a fine-grained, firm wood for furniture and interior finishings, and from some eccentric, freakish specimens the curious and highly prized "bird's-eye maple" and "curled maple" of the cabinet makers.

On the other hand the soft maple, while affording as good shade as the other, has soft, white wood of little value. Yet to the uneducated eye there seems little or no difference in the appearance of these two related trees, one of which is, nevertheless, so much superior to the other.

Among the oaks there are similar differences. The king of the oaks is probably the white oak, but the scarlet oak, the black oak and the red oak often excel it in size. I see as I write a scarlet oak whose vast spreading top is greater in diameter than the height of the tree, and itself alone shades a large lawn.

In the Autumn the foliage of this tree will be a blaze of orange-scarlet and crimson, while that of a white oak, which the uninstructed would probably take for the same variety of tree, only turns a light brown. The scalloped leaves of the oaks, like the noses, ears and chins of people, are distinguishing family marks. To call a tree by a wrong name is as bad as to mistake the name of a man.

Do you know an American elm from an English elm? Both grow on our soil and many persons call both, indifferently merely elms; but if the American elm could speak it would certainly object to being confounded with its British relative, for it is a remarkably noble looking tree and seems proud of the distinction that its presence gives to a landscape. "Streets planted with it become columned and arched like the aisles of a Gothic cathedral."

Are you acquainted with the splendid tulip tree (Liriodendron), which, though it is one of the tallest of trees, bears big flowers in Spring whose fragrance sweetens the air a hundred feet below them?

It would be a pity not to know a tulip tree from an ash, though both are tall, straight and look not very unlike to a careless eye, especially if the leaves are not noticed.

Everybody talks in the springtime of the beautiful dogwood blossoms, but can you tell a dogwood tree when it is not in flower? Do you know the tall, shiny leaved, soft white wooded basswood, a joy to the boy's jackknife? You could bury your teeth in the wood. In that respect it is like the great cottonwoods.

You must surely know the buttonwood, which is often called sycamore, though improperly, since the sycamore of the Bible was a species of fig and that of Europe is a maple, and both were thus named long before the American tree, which is different from either. The buttonwood has been called "the largest of the trees of the Atlantic fore-ests." Its compact brown wood is largely used for making cigar boxes. You need to have a buttonwood tree pointed out only once; you will remember it ever after by its towering from and the curious mottling, white, brown and gray, of its huge trunk.

Sausage From Cotton Seed

The United States is certainly the "land of cotton." Nowhere else in the world is cotton grown in such abundance and put to such a variety of uses. The fibre of course, is made into cloth; the oil from the seeds is used as a good substitute for olive oil and as a basis for lard, and now the seeds themselves are being ground into flour and used for food purposes. To make the cottonseed sausage three pounds of sausage meat is mixed with one pound of cottonseed flour. This flour is said to contain as much nutrition as pork sausage.

Warding Off Lung Trouble

BY BRICE BELDEN, M.D.

In addition to avoiding as much as possible the chance of infection with the bacillus of tuberculosis, persons predisposed to lung trouble should give the greatest care to their bodily nutrition and keep their weight up to the normal standard by judicious feeding with plain fare—meats, bread and butter, etc.

Many predisposed persons are fond of eating things that give but little nourishment to the body and only contribute to disorder digestion. They may give pleasure in the eating, but the cost of such pleasure in lowered resistance and disease is entirely too great.

Examples of this kind of fancy eating and drinking are afforded by coffee and tea in excess, alcoholic beverages, excess of fruits, sweets pies, etc.

The drinking of large amounts of ice water causes wasting and dilation of the stomach. Such a habit would certainly tend to impair nutrition, and anything that does that invites tuberculosis.

Chronic nicotine poisoning, fast eating (taking fifteen minutes to a meal instead of forty) and violent exercise, causing heart strain, are all factors that lower vitality and which should be avoided by those predisposed to tuberculosis.

A hygienic life is a far greater safeguard against the disease than the false sense of security furnished by some vaunted climate. The effect of climate in the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis has been greatly overestimated.

By keeping up the body weight, maintaining the muscles hard and firm, developing a strong heart by exercise and eating good food most people will safeguard themselves against tuberculosis. All but those strongly predisposed to tuberculosis may feel reasonably sure of escaping it if they do not neglect these things.

Many people observe all the care we have outlined and yet are consumed by a fear of the disease. The majority of these persons have no reason for their fears, and their anxiety helps to neutralise all the good that flows from their precautions.

THE VOYAGE OUT

The Voyage Out. By Virginia Woolf. New York: George H. Doran Company.

This English novel, by an English writer, gives promise in its opening chapters of much entertainment. Later, the reader is disappointed. That the author knows her London in its most interesting aspects—those in which members of Parliament and their coterie of relatives and friends are the active figures—there can be no doubt. But aside from a certain cleverness—which, being all in one key, palls on one after going through a hundred pages of it—there is little in this offering to make it stand out from the ruck of mediocre novels which make far less literary pretension.

As for the story itself, it is painfully lacking, both in coherency and narrative interest. Ridley Ambrose, a professor, and his wife, Helen, a woman of the smart London world, are going to the antipodes on a vessel owned by Helen's brother-in-law, Willoughby Vinrace. It is called the Euphrosyne. On the ship are Willoughby's daughter, 24 years old, Rachel, a Mr. Pepper, wealthy and eccentric, with a leaning to abstruse learning, and a middle aged, philandering member of Parliament and his wife, Clarissa whom they pick up at Lisbon. These people all talk smartly, and one rather wonders what it is all about, for it does not seem to get anywhere in particular. Rachel has been kept by her father in ignorance of everything which might be presumed to injure the mind of a "young person." So it is not strange that one night she permits Mr. Dalloway to kiss her and confesses that she rather likes the sensation. Later Rachel is turned over to Helen to be brought up as her father would wish—that is, a proper kind of English young lady. So the story maunders on, and the fact that it is crowded with incident, most of it futile, and that the clever talk by every one continues in a confusing cataract in every chapter does not save it from becoming extremely tedious. "The Voyage Out" is announced as the author's first novel. That fact is the most hopeful thing about it. With the cleverness shown here, crude as most of it is, there should be a possibility of something worth while from the same pen in the future.

Medical Missionary, Describes Experiences On Arrival In New York

New York, June 27.—Dr. A. L. Shelton, a medical missionary stationed for seventeen years at Batang, China, on the Thibetan border, arrived in New York yesterday after undergoing surgical treatment at the Mayo Hospital, Rochester, Minn., made necessary by his sufferings while held captive for ransom by the bandit, Yang Tien-fu. Dr. Shelton will preach at the Central Church of the Disciples of Christ, No. 142 West 81st Street, this morning.

"We left Batang in November, and I was bringing my wife and daughters to the coast on their way home," said Dr. Shelton yesterday, telling his story. "I was going back to the interior. We had been coming toward the coast forty-seven days, when all of a sudden bandits began firing at us from a cliff. Soon they swooped down and took everything we had, including myself.

"They asked me to go up the road and see their chief. Supposing he merely wanted to talk to me I went. They tried to take my wife and children, but soldiers came from the town and saved them.

"The bandits kept me seventy-one days. We are greatly indebted to Father Bailly, a French Catholic missionary, who has lived in Yunnan thirty years, and who took Mrs. Shelton and the girls to Yunnanfu while I was carried off through the country, constantly on the move, until I escaped.

RANSOM DEMANDED

"The bandits wanted to get the Governor of the Province into trouble. There were grudges and political reasons. They know I was coming through and waited for me. They demanded $30,000 worth of arms and ammunition in exchange for me, but I talked the chief, Yang Tien-fu out of this, saying I would not be ransomed, because it would get every missionary in the district into danger. Then he demanded a blanket pardon for himself and 300 followers.

I was in favor of this, for in his band were many good fellows who wanted to get back to civil life and honesty. Everything was ready to be signed up on this plan when the Governor tried to surrounded them in the night to put them to death at the end of the first month of our wanderings.

"They escaped with me, and for forty days thereafter I underwent the most terrible travels, with soldiers after us, sleeping out on the mountains, forced marches, and all the time undergoing torture from a tumor that began growing on my neck. At the end of the second month I was so weak that I rolled off my mule unless tied and held on. Then they carried me another five days on two poles, at the end of which I was so nearly dead they left me in an old hay barn with four guards and instructions that if I died my body was to be secreted. If I got better they were to be notified and would come back after me.

"For five days I lay in a hole in the rice straw and rested. Then came a report that soldiers were coming, and the whole village fled except the old man who brought me rice.

HIS ESCAPE

"The soldiers did not come, but a small official went through, and in the excitement I got out of the barn and made my way to the nearest Christian village, where I got a small pony, and the church elders held me on him for twenty hours until, the middle of the next afternoon, I reached a place where there was a magistrate and soldiers.

"Three days later, with an escort, I was met by Dr. E. P. Osgood of Chuchow, sent by our mission, and J. P. Thornton of the Standard Oil Company, who had been appointed special representative of the United States to negotiate with the bandits for my release."

Dr. Shelton was operated on at the French hospital at Yunnanfu, united with his family and sent to America for surgical treatment here.

U. S. ARMY DOWN TO 210,900

Great American Emergency Forces Have Vanished

Washington, June 26.—June 24 the personnel of the army had been reduced to 210,900 officers and men. Commissioned officers numbered 15,619. Regular Army officers numbered 8,087, which is 3,587, or 30.7 percent, below the authorised strength.

The great American emergency army had quite disappeared. Of 214,116 enlistments in the Regular Army since Feb. 28, 1919, a total of 173,800 were in the service June 19, when the total enlisted strength was approximately 196,000.

Up to June 21 a total of 181,114 emergency officers who served during the war had been discharged.

Excellent health conditions throughout the army in the United States were reported for the week ending June 18. There were seven deaths from disease.

Padang Rubber Company Holds Annual Meeting

The tenth annual general meeting of the Padang Rubber Company was held yesterday afternoon at the company's offices, No. 2 Kukiang Road. The annual report presented by the Chairman was as follows:

CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH

"Gentlemen: The Report and Accounts having been in your hands for some time, I will follow the usual course and take them as read.

"At the last annual meeting, the Chairman referred to the probable necessity for more conservative tapping and to the prevalence of Brown Bast on the estate and I regret to say that a report on the property made shortly afterwards confirmed our fears in regard to these matters. The estate was at once put on to the "single cut on the quarter" and the thinning out of trees affected by Brown Bast was proceeded with as rapidly as possible, resulting in a heavy drop in the output and a corresponding increase in the cost. A very conservative method of tapping will have to be continued in the future as the condition of the bark is far from satisfactory.

"Owing to the hilly nature of the Estate, nothing but Chinese tapping has been possible in the past and in recent months a great deal of wounding has occurred, which owing to lack of efficient supervision has been difficult to check.

"Mr. Low the manager has been in indifferent health for some time and unable to give proper attention to the work and he was obliged to go home in August last. His successor Mr. Barclay suffered from attacks of fever and resigned his position in April of this year and ill health has occasioned several changes during the year among the subordinate staff.

"All these changes resulted in disorganisation in what is, at any time, a difficult labor force to handle, and the estate has suffered accordingly. I am glad to say that conditions show some improvement, though ill-health of both foreign staff and native labor is causing us considerable anxiety and we are obtaining expert advice on measures to improve matters in this respect.

"The accounts are self-explanatory. A further heavy loss in exchange is shown owing to the low rate ruling at the end of the financial year, but I think that our losses in this direction must be now at an end. The loss this year is unduly heavy as the Straits War Loan of $50,000 was repaid during the year and this stood in our last accounts at an exchange of 46⅛. The directors have not considered it necessary to write down the $50,000 F. M. S. Loan to the low rate ruling at the end of the year and at today's rate this investment shows practically no loss.

"The company has ample cash funds and their conservation in past years enables the directors to recommend the payment of a small dividend. They propose the transfer of Tls. 15,000 from equalisation of dividend account to profit and loss, and the payment of a dividend of 5 percent; the buildings and other perishable assets being written down to nominal figures as in the past.

"As I told you in 1917, the aim of your directors was to maintain a steady rate of dividend and that the dividend reserve was created to meet unforseen contingencies in the future, which contingencies have I regret to say now arrived. They have been accentuated by the low price of rubber but I think the future can be looked to with confidence in this respect as remunerative prices can be obtained forward for the whole of the year 1921.

"If any shareholders have any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer them."

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions then were adopted:

RESOLUTION No. 1

Proposed by A. W. Burkill and seconded by Chun Bing-him:

"That the report and accounts as presented, together with the recommendation for transfer from equalisation of dividend fund to profit and loss account and for the appropriation of balance of profit and loss account as presented be accepted."

RESOLUTION No. 2

Proposed by Chun Bing-him and seconded by J. V. C. Davis:

"That the appointment of Mr. A. W. Burkill as a director of the Company be confirmed."

RESOLUTION No. 3

Proposed by A. W. Burkill and seconded by S. R. Owen:

"That Mr. Chun Bing-him be re-elected a director of the Company."

RESOLUTION No. 4

Proposed by J. V. C. Davis and seconded by S. R. Owen:

"That Messrs. G. H. and N. Thomson be elected auditors to the Company."

ALLIES LEFT NO OIL AT ALL FOR ARABS

Andre Tardieu Reveals Joker Which Gives Britain And France Output In Mesopotamia

London, June 26.—Premier Lloyd George, during Wednesday's debate in the House of Commons on Mesopotamia, sought to refute charges of British oil grabbing by declaring: "The whole property will belong to the Arab state, subject to any arrangements made before the war with Turkey." However, the proviso contained in this statement appears, according to revelations by Andre Tardieu published in l'Illustration, to be a joker which takes every drop of oil from the Arabs and places it in the hands of the British and French. Tardieu, in describing what Lloyd George referred to as "any arrangements made before the war with Turkey," writes:

"On June 28, 1914, the British Government after negotiations of several years carried through by its Ambassador at Constantinople, Sir Louis Mallet, obtained from the Sultan for the Turkish Petroleum Company, founded in March, 1914, an exclusive concession for petroleum discovered or thereafter to be discovered in the villayets of Mosul and Bagdad. The company consisted of 75 percent British capital—the National Bank of Turkey, the Darcy group and the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company—and 25 percent German capital—the Deutsche Bank."

Incidentally the Turkish Petroleum Company is closely allied through its directors with the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. Therefore, in view of Tardieu's statement, if it is correct and the concession still binding, the oil left for the Arab state appears absolutely non-existent. Tardieu then explains how the German interest of 25 percent was seized by the British at the outbreak of the war and placed in the hands of a trustee. He then gives the details of British and French maneuvers since the armistice in the great oil fight, concluding at the San Remo conference when Lloyd George succeeded in pacifying France with the confiscated German share. Besides the native interest there is also the question of American rights which the Premier declared on Wednesday would be protected if proved.
